

DOUBLE SUICIDE AN ACT OF PATRIOTISM

JAPANESE CONSIDER DEATH OF COUNT AND COUNTESS NOGI
AS PATRIOTIC DEED.

CAREFULLY ARRANGED

Couple Dressed Themselves in Full Japanese Costume, and When Emperor's Body Departed
From Capitol Stabbed Themselves.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Tokio, Sept. 14.—The dramatic death of General Count Marssuko Nogi, the soldier's hero of Japan, and that of his wife, the Countess Nogi, who yesterday coincidentally with the departure from the capitol of the body of the late Emperor Mutsuhito for his final resting place at Monzama committed suicide, the general by gashing his throat with a sword, and the countess by stabbing herself in the abdomen, is regarded by the great soldiers of Japan and by the General's other countrymen as a magnificent act of patriotic duty.

The double suicide followed the attendance by the general and countess of the funeral ceremonies of the late emperor. When he reached his home the general sat down and wrote a letter to his new sovereign, Yoshihito, and then placed a band of ecre around a wall picture of Mutsuhito.

Summoning his wife, the couple rehearsed their plans for committing suicide, arranging a time that would be coincident with the departure from the capitol of the late ruler's body.

The countess and her wife were breathing when found by an inmate of the Nogi home, but before aid could be summoned they were dead.
Letters left by General Nogi, it is understood, explain his deed and also contain an apology to Prince Arthur of Connaught, the special ambassador of Great Britain at the imperial funeral, to whom the Japanese soldier was especially attached.

No messages of condolence in connection with the suicide of the count and countess will be sent for several days.

Kyoto, Japan, Sept. 14.—The imperial funeral train bearing the body of the late Emperor Mutsuhito, which
the conclusion of impressive ceremonies in the great funeral hall there arrived at Kyoto this afternoon. The body of the dead ruler will be buried tomorrow in mausoleum at Motoyama five miles from Kyoto.

During the three hundred and fifty mile journey thousands of people were permitted to pay their respect to their late sovereign. Huge crowds were gathered at the roadside and stood with bowed heads as the funeral train passed by.

An imperial salute was fired by the Japanese warships in Tokyo Bay as the funeral train passed along the coast toward Aoyama.

The casket was left in the funeral hall at Aoyama for the imperial train in charge of the Shinto Ritualists and representatives of his majesty.

A special railway line had been built from the main track to the rear of the funeral hall and there the funeral train was waiting. The train consisted of a large locomotive which was draped with mourning flags and four other passenger cars besides the funeral car which was in the center of the train.

The interior of the funeral car was divided into three compartments the center one being reserved for the casket. This middle room was fitted with side doors to permit the exit of the huge casket. The casket rested on a low dais raised two feet above the floor.

The party that accompanied the body of the late Emperor on the journey were holders of orders of merit, of ministers of the state army and navy and other grades of officials.
The commander of the 16th division of the army and the commander of the Maitzuru naval station accompanied the train together with the president of the House of Peers and the House of Representatives. The governor of Kyoto, also and the president of the assembly of the house of Peers and a number of peers residing in the district of Kyoto.

To Send No Message.

Washington, Sept. 14.—Official condolence on the death of General Nogi and Countess Nogi probably will not be transmitted to Japan by the United States department. Officials believe that as in the estimation of the Japanese, the suicide of Count Nogi and his wife was heroic and in conformity with the ancient custom condolence might be in bad taste.

ROBBERS INFEST VILLAGE IN NORTHERN WISCONSIN.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Chippewa Falls, Wis., Sept. 14.—Today Sheriff McCann received a call from the town of Cornell, 20 miles north of here on the Chippewa River, asking that police protection be sent there at once. As the town is not an incorporated village it has no police and recently thugs and hold-up men have infested the locality and were robbing people in daylight then escaping to the woods, which surrounds the place.

WANTS STRICT LAWS
ON FIRE PROTECTION

Uniform Building Code And Lessons
On Fire Waste in Schools
Asked by State Fire Marshal.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Sept. 14.—The adoption of a uniform building code, the enactment of laws regulating the storage of gasoline and dynamite, the adoption of a statute prohibiting the sale of so-called parlor matches, and the passage of a law providing for the giving of at least one lesson each week in all public schools on fire waste and fire prevention are among the recommendations made by state fire marshal T. M. Purcell to Governor Mc-Govern. The department also recommends the enactment of legislation making it the duty of officers and members of paid fire departments to inspect the buildings and premises in the business districts monthly, and improving them to enforce the correction of hazardous conditions.

The report gives a detailed analysis of the work of a department during the past year. A brief summary indicates there have been 2330 fires during the year ending July 1, 1912, involving losses aggregating $4,012, 980. The cause specifically assigned the greatest number of times was "defective chimneys" and is closely related "Spark from Chimney." There have been 306 such fires, resulting in aggregate loss of $329,515. The next largest cause assigned was "lightning" ascribed to 521 fires, involving damage to the extent of $476,630. Another large promitive cause for fires is shown to be "match carelessness."
This origin was assigned to 173 fires, involving losses aggregating $7,205.
Included in the report is a list of the prosecutions for incendiarism. Report shows that the department has assisted in collecting evidence for 39 cases during the year, involving 44 defendants. Of these 20 have already been convicted by a jury, 12 more have been bound over and are awaiting trial, 2 have been found insane, one is a fugitive from justice, and in the remaining two cases, there was a disagreement of the jury. In seven other cases there was either an acquittal or discharge on preliminary examination.

eral leading Iowa progressives joined the governor's party here and made the trip through the state.

Lavalley, the 19 year old girl, who was given a coat of tar and feathers by a party of eight women, who then told her to leave town, is supposed to be in seclusion in Cleveland. Don-Young, the prosecuting attorney, here has said no action will be taken to bring the perpetrators to justice

do within a short time.

EXPECT ENROLLMENT
NEAR SIX THOUSAND

Increased Number of Students at University Will Result in Room Shortage.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Sept. 14.—The probability of room scarcity for students in the city of Madison is eminent. The students rooming directory issued today contains a smaller list of rooms than were scheduled in last year's bulletin, and the prices are uniformly higher. A canvass has been made of the university section for vacant rooms and the list would indicate that many of the students will have to go miles further for rooms this year than last year.

Although today was the fixed day for the commencement of registration, the university authorities expect less than a thousand students will be here next week. Most of the students will come to Madison on Sept. 23, and university classes will be started Sept.
25th. It is estimated that the enrollment of students will reach the 6000 mark this year as compared to 5,748 matriculated last year. The fees and tuition expected from these students will approximate $150,000 and the monthly pay roll of the university will reach $165,000. There are about 590 members of the university faculty.

General improvements and repairs costing $25,000 have been made during the summer. Three buildings are now in process of erection—agricultural chemistry building, biology building, and home economic building. Some of the students have already arrived, both to register and prepare their rooms. It is expected that the number of coeds at the university this year will greatly exceed the number last year. Chadbourne Hall, the principal women's rooming and boarding house, has been rented far ahead of the opening time. One hundred and fifteen women will occupy the building. Reservations were complete by August 1st, nearly two months before the opening of the school.

The year's calendar has one noticeable change. The Thanksgiving Day vacation has been cut down to only one day and the additional days have been given to the Christmas vacation.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Mobile, Ala., Sept. 14.—The equinoxial storm which struck the Gulf Coast region last night and threatened to do considerable damage to this city had abated this morning. While conditions are still unsettled, it is felt that the disturbance has spent itself so far as Mobile is concerned. A small river steamer was sunk early today and was raised by the wind and considerable minor damage was done.

day to learn what disposition was made of the $7,100 in funds of Mrs.
Rosa Sozba for whose alleged murder Burton W. Gibson is now under arrest at Goshing, N. Y. Gibson as executor of Mrs. Sozba's estate opened an account in a local bank in August, depositing the funds of Mrs. Sozba, and the name of Mrs. Sozba as executor of her estate withdrew all but $200. The investigators are trying to find out what he did with the money.
They are working on the report that Mrs. Sozba had another attorney other than Gibson and are hunting for him.

Lained, Kansas, Sept. 14.—Horsewhips and clubs, the woman's anti-gambling association of Lained, have decided to use against the city gamblers if they do not leave the home-loving husbands of this town alone.
Following the futile efforts of the po-

GOVERNOR EBERHART
MAY ORDER TROOPS TO DULUTH STRIKE

Minnesota Executive Inspects Situation While Company Manager Declares Traffic Will Be Resumed.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Duluth, Minn., Sept. 14.—With Governor Eberhart here thoroughly scrutinizing the strike situation and with a conference in session between the governor and city officials and others which may or may not result in an order for troops, Manager Warren of the railway company ordered 75 per cent of the normal service resumed.
Mr. Warren declared that car service would be brought up to normal before night fall.

A number of deputy sheriffs are on duty at the car barns and other places along the line where it is feared outbreaks might occur. Manager Warren says he feels more comfortable today than at any time heretofore.

He believes the sheriffs who now have charge of the policing of the strike is determined to do business and quell any rioting with a firm hand.
Duluth, Minn., Sept. 14.—The strike situation here remains unchanged with but few cars running which have their windows covered with heavy netting and the public walks as it has all week.
Today the court will hear the first of a series of suits against the car companies in an attempt to force the resumption of service by injunction.
Sheriff Meininger, who last night was asked to resign or to enforce the protection of property, in a statement to Governor Eberhart says he had not been given control until last Friday by Mayor McCune and that since that time he has checked rioting.

Strike Breaker Dies.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

George A. Hedden of Chicago, a strike breaker, is this morning reported to be dying in a local hospital.
Yesterday he fired into a crowd of strike sympathizers and was roughly handled. His skull is said to be fractured. The Chicago "detectives" did some shooting during the trouble yesterday and one man was arrested. The mob then took after the "arrested" man and he was released. The Chicago men fired volleys into the air, and the shots were returned by the strikers, as is evidenced by the bullet holes in the car windows and in the car work. One of the things increasing difficulties in the strike situation is that many dock men and mill hands are quitting work to go to help the strikers.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Manitowoc, Wis., Sept. 14.—The ormetering of all public schools will probably be carried to the courts if necessary a strong protest having gone up from friends of the schools who say the move is done to curtail the finances of the schools and handicap their work. A recent ruling of the state rate commission held in effect that in cases where the city took over a utility, the contract of the previous owners could not be altered without an order from the commission and the fact that the old water company furnished water free to the schools will be made the basis of the fight against the new order.

EX-SULTAN ENJOYS
GAYETY OF FRANCE

Former Moroccan Ruler Finds It Difficult to Live On $200 A Day Allowance of French Government.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Paris, Sept. 14.—Mulei Hafid, ex-Sultan of Morocco, has graduated rapidly in the pleasures of his European hosts at Vichy, during his cure. One evening he was taken behind the scenes of the Casino The-atret preceding the first act of a ballet, and he complimented the dancers with flattering enthusiasm. Earlier in the evening he had given his first dinner party, and in the afternoon he had figured at a reception held in his honor by the municipality. Both as host and guest he bore himself with much charm of manner, and as a writer of graceful sentiments in ladies' albums he has already proved himself hard to equal.

A knowledge of live-stock is another of the ex-Sultan's accomplishments. He inspected a herd of Nivernaise cows with an unerring eye, picked the three best and ordered them to be sent to his house in Tangier. He even began to milk one of them to make sure that his judgment was not at fault. He also purchased two black cats and a collie dog. For his children he bought a hundred dollars in Bourbonnais costume, a mechanical piano-player, a merry-go-round and an extraordinary quantity of toys.

He presented a handful of gold to a conjurer who performed the venerable trick of making a globe of goldfish disappear before him and the one of his overabundant spread far and wide. Whenever he was known to be in his apartments, dozens of hawkers were to be seen hovering round the gate, watching for a chance of catching his eye.

The ex-Sultan was taken to the Marseilles Cathedral, and managed to slip five louis into the hand of a blind beggar on the steps as he went in. After presenting the Cathedral alms with fifteen louis for the poor, he came out and mounted in the elevator to the Basilica, distributing on the way five louis to a postcard morchant and five louis to the elevator boy. From the Basilica the party went to the Casino; and the orchestra happening to play his favorite "Sambre et Meuse" march, was rewarded with five louis, the distribution of largesse concluding with two louis to another blind beggar at the door of the Casino.

By this time the disgust of the Sultan's financial adviser was changing to patriotic, and he was heard to express the opinion that at "this rate, we shan't get very far." At the present rate of exchange a louis is worth $4, so that it will be seen that the ex-Sultan's magnificence for the afternoon amounted to the respectable total of $150, out of the pension of $300 a day the French government allows him.
The evening found Mulei Hafid in a music hall, and a short glimpse of the chorus girls behind the scenes cost him the balance of his day's pay and

DESCRIBES PRIVATIONS IN GEN. GRANT'S ARMY

In contrast to the picture drawn by Captain George B. Ely of the Second Wisconsin in describing the trials of the soldiers in campaigning under a hot southern sun, with the temperature at 100 degrees, is the letter of J. M. Kimball, once a well known Janesville resident, who has been dead for a number of years. In a letter written to the Gazette on October 7, 1863, which was published in the issue of October 16, 1863, Mr. Kimball describes the privations of the soldiers of the army under Grant in the west, who were encamped at Chattanooga. The letter was written a month previous to the battle of Chattanooga, and Grant's forces were throwing up fortifications at the time. Lack of sufficient clothing to keep them warm, with the cold, damp weather made life anything but pleasant for the soldiers, and in addition to this, there was a shortage of rations, one of the supply trains having been captured by the Rebels. Conditions as they then existed are described by Mr. Kimball, who went out with the troops from this city in Company B of the Fifth Wisconsin, but was later detailed to service in the Signal Corps.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Oct. 7, '63. Editors Gazette:—Today is one of those cold, windy, rainy, dark, foggy, disagreeable days which the Tennessee valley can produce only at this time of the year. On these days the cold, clouds, winds, animals and old Dame Nature herself seem to be in their worst possible mood. How I pity our poor beasts such times as these when they have to stand shivering in the cold storm and have nothing but a few weeds to subsist upon. For four days our horses have not seen grain and by this time they feel and look quite thin.

We are on less than half rations ourselves and for two days have had very little indeed, and the prospect for more is not cheering by any means; but I can go quite hungry myself if my horse is only well fed. The troops are all on short rations and have been for some time, but they all bear it cheerfully and work willingly on the fortifications with their crackers and little meat for each day's food.

Many of the infantry lost their blankets and overcoats when we moved from Murfreesboro last summer, and not having had any opportunity to draw others, are necessarily very cold these damp foggy nights. They keep large fires burning in front of their shelter tents the whole night as their only means of warmth. Our dear friends at home in their quiet, easy parlors by the side of the cheerful fire, and well protected from the blast, can form but little idea of how such times as these try the courage, loyalty and firmness of the troops in the field. We hope our time of such fare is about at an end. The river has been very high for a few days past, rendering the bridges impassable, and the road over the mountains has been so very slippery that the trains have been very much delayed, but the water is falling some now, and trains are beginning to arrive so we keep up good courage. The bridges were only partly held up by pontoons until since the rain on the 1st inst., but now they float high and secure.

The capture and burning of that train on the 2nd inst., was one of the greatest causes of our wants. It is to be hoped that more such trains will be sent without guard. Since the battle there has been a great change in this army. The 20th and 21st Corps have been combined and now form the 4th Corps, commanded by Gen. Gordon Granger. The three division commanders are, Sheridan, Wood and Palmer. Gen. J. C. Davis is chief of ordnance in this department. Gen. R. W. Johnson takes command at Stevenson, Alabama.

There are rumors that the rebels are leaving our front but we discredit them. We have given up all hopes of their making an assault on our lines. They know too well the slaughter pen they would be forced into if they made such a move. They are busy throwing up works and mounting guns on Lookout Mountain and Missionary Ridge, thus enclosing us on the east and south. On the 11th they tried the range of some of their guns, but after firing about 100 shots without doing much damage, they ceased firing. We will be able in a short time to stand a long siege here, as far as withstanding shot and shell are concerned.

Hoping soon to be able to tell you that we are once more on the move after Bragg, I close.

J. M. Kimball.
P. S.—If the tone of this letter is a little mournful attribute it to short rations and an empty stomach.

HOW A HIGH SCHOOL READJUSTED ITSELF TO NEW CONDITIONS

Colebrook Academy Provides Industrial Courses While Remaining A General High School.

How can the high school best meet the needs of the community? The people of Colebrook, New Hampshire, think they have solved the problem. Their experiment is interestingly described in a bulletin just issued for free distribution by the United States Bureau of Education.

Colebrook Academy is located in a town of about 2,000 population in northern New Hampshire. Starting in the first third of the century as a private school, it later became part of the public system of education. For years it has successfully done the work expected of a high school in the traditional branches of the New England school. Now it is trying to do something more. Without lowering its standards, without ceasing to furnish the training necessary for those going into the professions, it is endeavoring to provide an adequate education for the great mass of boys and girls who ought to remain and grow up with the country. It is seeking, in other words, to reading in itself to the needs of the particular community in which it is. Just what this readjustment means may be seen from the following four significant additions to the school plant: the greenhouse, the dairy laboratory, the domestic arts department, and the workshop, including a carpenter and blacksmith shop. Complete courses are given in agriculture and domestic science. Colebrook is the center of a rural district, and these are the vital interests of a large part of the population.

Colebrook Academy does not propose to become a vocational school. It remains a general high school. The courses in agriculture and domestic science exist side by side with thorough courses in the traditional high school subjects, as well as the commercial branches. "Its purpose is not primarily to make good farmers, or skilled mechanics, or professional bookkeepers," says Hon. H. C. Morrison, State superintendent of New Hampshire. "The primary object is the education of the boy and girl to become a sincere and efficient and happy man and woman, capable of becoming an educated worker with material things, capable of getting life's happiness out of work rather than out of the leisure which comes after work, if indeed it comes at all. A further purpose is to educate the strongest youth for the farm and the industries instead of toward the professions and business exclusively."

In the work of the school it is repeatedly emphasized that the new courses are established in the belief that there is just as truly a cultural development or domestic science as from competent instruction in Latin. The significance of the Colebrook movement lies in the fact that it demonstrates the basic principle upon which the American high school must stand or fall, that it shall be a direct source of strength to the community that pays for it. The feeling exists that secondary rural schools have in many instances weakened the communities which supported them; that by the very efficiency of their work, they have trained young men and women for other fields of usefulness and have thus frequently deprived the community of the services of its best citizens. It is said that New Hampshire has been a notable sufferer from this process, and that readjustment is necessary if the process is to be checked and the up-building of the country districts is to go on again. All over the country there is the same problem. It seems obvious that if the public high school is to justify itself it must constantly put back into the community the best of each generation as permanent residents.

Particularly important is the part to be played by the reconstructed rural high school in the country life movement. The Colebrook Academy dignifies the fundamental arts of agriculture and home-making. Given schools of this type, with a program of studies matching the real interests of the community, and rural civilization may in truth be made as efficient and satisfying as other civilization.

Mrs. Raymond Robins. "It is the workingman to whom the women must look for the ballot," recently declared Mrs. Raymond Robins, wife of the noted Chicago reformer. "It is he who best knows the needs of the working woman, because they are practically the same as his own. He knows too that the woman's ballot will help him to gain his own rights." Mrs. Robins lives in a Chicago tenement. She left a life of luxury to help the workers, and is widely known for the good that she has done.

A Sick Man

Writes Dr. Hartman About Kidney Disease.

A gentleman writes me: "I was a great deal interested in your article describing the Kauffmann case of serious disease of the kidneys. The description of his case exactly outlines my condition. I am sure if I am cured of my disease, it will cure me also. I am losing flesh rapidly and the doctors say I have every symptom of Bright's disease of the kidneys. If you think I would be benefited by Peruna I will certainly try some as the doctors have practically given me up, the same as they did him."

In reply I wish to say, first, that I never make any promises as to what Peruna will cure. No physician can make positive statements of that sort. I can say this much, however, if I were in your place I should certainly give Peruna a trial. I know of no other remedy that would be so likely to be of use to you in your present condition as Peruna. Take a tablespoonful before each meal and at bedtime. Continue this for two or three weeks and then if there is anything you wish to ask me further write me and I will give you my letter prompt attention.

If I find that the Peruna is not helping you I will be perfectly frank and tell you so, for I would not have you take Peruna unless it was really helping you. But it has rescued so many cases of kidney disease that I am quite confident you will find it exactly suited to your case.

Kidney disease begins with catarrh of the kidneys. Peruna is a cathartic of the kidneys. Unless the destruction of the kidneys is already too great, Peruna relieves the catarrh and the cause of the kidney disease is removed.

I shall anxiously await a report of your case. Remember, all letters are sacredly confidential. I never use any one's name or address without his written consent. My correspondence is absolutely private.

Peruna is for sale at all drug stores. Special Notice—Many persons are making inquiries for the old-time Peruna. To such would say, this formula is now put out under the name of KA-TAR-NO, manufactured by KA-TAR-NO COMPANY, Columbus, Ohio. Write them and they will be pleased to send you a free booklet.

BIG BATTLE FOUGHT HALF CENTURY AGO

Union and Confederate Armies Met at South Mountain, Less Than Fifty Miles from Washington.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Washington, D. C., Sept. 14.—Fifty years ago the national capital was anxiously awaiting news of the outcome of the great battle that was being fought by the Union and Confederate armies at South Mountain, less than fifty miles distant from Washington. This battle was really the decisive one of the Maryland campaign and led to the great fight at Antietam three days later.

South Mountain is a spur of the Blue Ridge range, extending north of the Potomac from Harper's Ferry. There are two passes through the mountains, one known as Turner's gap and the other as Crampton's gap. The first-named affords a passage from Frederick to Williamsport, while Crampton's gap, a few miles to the south, gives a similar opening to Harper's Ferry.

President Dan Johnson, of the American League, and Charles A. Comiskey, owner of the Chicago White Sox, have both placed their O. K. on the new ball players union. "I am sure the leagues and owners will raise no objection to any such organization in the event that it is formed to better conditions for the players," declares Mr. Johnson.

"It looks to me," says Mr. Comiskey, "as if a lot of good might be done by both the players and the owners with such a body at the head of the men engaged in the game. I don't think any unreasonable demands will be made and I don't believe the players intend to wreck the game which is just now at the height of its prosperity. With sensible men at the head of the fraternity, who will confer with league officials on important questions, it looks to me as if all sides should profit."

Dan Daly, the giant white hope, who is being managed by Jimmie Dime, of New Castle, Pa., looks like one of the corners in the future game. He recently defeated Billy Edwards, the Pittsburgh colored heavyweight, at Cleveland with comparative ease. Daly stands nearly six feet six inches, weighs 220 pounds, and is possessed of an immense reach and terrific hitting power. He looks like one of the best of the young white hopes, and should make a name for himself.

Another young white heavyweight who deserves recognition is Tom McMahon, who put Big Jim Barry on the blink not long ago. McMahon is also under Dime's management. He is a game and aggressive fighter and knows a good deal about the inside of the game. He is light, but at present looks good enough to win over any 165-pound fighter they can send against him.

Starting life over again just where he left it thirty years ago to become one of the greatest powers in western turf affairs, Edward Corrigan has returned to Kansas City Mo., and started in as a stone contractor. He has retained but one object to remind him of the time when he was the most imposing figure in the world's greatest paddocks. That is a beautiful horse, which he drives every morning to his quarry.

Dan Daly and Luther McCarthy are matched to meet in Cleveland on the night of September 23. McCarthy is the chap who jumped into the limelight by tumbling Carl Morris.

Paul Cobb, rightfielder of the Lincoln Western league team, and a brother of Ty Cobb of the Detroit Tigers, is out of the game for the season with a broken arm. He was hit with a pitched ball.

The recent order of Governor Dix, declaring as against the laws of New York the proposed bout between Packey McFarland and Ad Wolgast, is causing some concern to the fight fans of that state. "If the governor claims that the bout would be a violation of law, every bout now held must be a violation," declares Billy Gibson, promoter of the match.

SCHOOL ELEVEN IN A LIGHT PRACTICE

Players Are Fastly Rounding Into Shape And Are Rapidly Learning Trick of The Game.

Light practice was held last night by the local high school football eleven. Coach Curtis was absent and Captain Andy Connell was requested to give the squad a light workout. A new feature was the running back of punts, which Connell and Bolder did with great accuracy. Elder is a hard man to tackle and many on the squad found it to be so after making hard attempts to down him. It is thought that if these two men can be tackled by any member of the local squad, chances will be very bright for a good defensive team, as they are both good dodgers and fast runners.

James Stewart, a corner at quarterback, was on the same job and was very slippery at times, fooling even the veterans. Fager did the punning and is beginning to show that he has a boot on him, as many of his kicks went as far as sixty yards. No practice will be held today. Members of the squad are studying the new rules to become acquainted with them. Many changes have been altered over last year's rules, and it is necessary that each member know the changes and understand them. It is doubtful if a game can be arranged with outside teams before September 28th, as practice was very late in starting this year. A practice game will undoubtedly be played next Saturday if the teams can get together. All the men are in the pink of condition, with the exception of a few who have slight attacks of colds, and unless injuries occur within the next two weeks the team will be ready to outpoint any opponent which Coach Curtis might bring on.

BIRMINGHAM WILL MAKE GOOD AS NAPS' NEW MANAGER, THINK CLEVELAND FANS

Harry Davis and Joe Birmingham.

Cleveland fans are confident that Joe Birmingham, the new manager of the Naps, will pull the team out of the deep rut into which it has fallen under Manager Harry Davis. Davis resigned on Labor day, and Birmingham's appointment was announced immediately.

Birmingham, who by the way, is the youngest manager in the major leagues, being only 28 years old, knows baseball. It ever anyone did. He is of the same school that gave Fielder Jones, Frank Chance and other stars to the national game. He has been one of the star performers on the Cleveland team, and enjoys the respect and confidence of all of the men under him.

Davis has not been a success. He has made many errors, and Cleveland fans credit to his leadership the fact that the Naps are not now in the first division.

TAFT PLAYS GOLF BEFORE GOING TO AUNT DELIA'S

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Beverly, Mass., Sept. 14.—President Taft hurried away from the breakfast table at Parramatta to the Myopia links today to get in a final round of golf before leaving by automobile for Milbury to visit Aunt Delia Torrey, and attend the party which she is to give in honor of his 55th birthday. There were no callers on the president's list and he planned to get away from Beverly in time to make a short speech in Worcester and reach Milbury for dinner. He will return to Beverly on Sunday.

American Turpentine

American turpentine is obtained chiefly from the longleaf pine, and the immense importance to which the trade in naval stores has come may be shown by the fact that in order to supply the demand for spirits of turpentine, rosin and other products of the pine tree's resin, there must be invaded annually $800,000 acres of virgin forest to make good the decreasing yield of the trees already tapped.

THE BEST 1913 MODEL AUTOMOBILES ARE HERE NOW

EAGER PURCHASERS ARE TAKING THEM AWAY DAILY

SEVEN 1913 MODELS HAVE BEEN SOLD FROM THIS GARAGE IN THE LAST TEN DAYS

For months and months the engineers in the various great factories devoted to automobile building have been straining all their energies to the perfection and completion of the advanced designs and models they were to place on the markets, throughout the country, at their agencies.

Several months before the first 1913 automobile announcement was made, careful inspection was made of the different makes that were to make their appearance on the local market about the last of August. This inspection resulted in our selecting the following lines:

OVERLAND SERVICE TRUCKS CHEVROLET
HERESHOFF RAMBLER
LITTLE MARMON STURDY STUTZ

And in these cars you have what we consider positively the best your money will buy in the motor world. Years of experience backed up our decision. Each minute point of the different models was carefully gone over before they were even considered. Many lines of cars were turned down. We wanted our patrons to have the best and we present it to them now in the above mentioned lines of cars for 1913.

The new Model 71 Overland is the acme of refinement, unequalled for luxurious riding. The ideal touring car and the choice of the man who wants speed and power combined with genuine comfort. $1650 with complete equipment. A low priced car when the superior and complete equipment is considered.

The Cross Country Rambler is a Great Car. For those who desire luxury. Very attractive in appearance, with graceful, snappy lines that are suggestive of speed. It rides as smoothly and noiselessly as the most costly cars built. $1700.

As much could be said about all the rest of the automobiles as we've said about the Overland and Rambler here. Your money will buy more real automobile value here than you possibly can elsewhere.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

"When a man makes any kind of success, however small, he finds that his friends resolve themselves into three classes. The first class turn sullen and show their envy in many mean ways. The second class will more friendly than ever and come showering their attentions. The third class show a reasonable pleasure at your success and remain just as they were before. God bless the last kind! God mend the second, and God pity the first!"—Robert Neilson Stephens.

The author of the sentiment contained in this paragraph, was a student of men, and his knowledge of human nature was acquired through experience and observation. The three classes of friends referred to only need the distinction of separation to be generally recognized, yet the first two have no claim to friendship, and should not be so regarded. Next to love, born of sacrifice, friendship is the most sacred thing on earth, and envy is as far removed from it as light from darkness. The best homes are the homes born in friendship, where loyalty developed before love entered, to seal the compact, and where the man and woman knew each other before the home was established.

The divorce courts are kept busy separating people on the grounds of incompatibility, which simply means that friendship, to say nothing about love, was never enjoyed by the contracting parties. To be a friend means more than being a lover, because the spirit which inspired friendship is of slower growth, and is not influenced by passion or infatuation. There is nothing incompatible about it, because it is based on mutual likes and dislikes, and the compact grows stronger through association. The men who are the closest today, were the boys of the last generation, whose attachments were formed at the old swimming hole and by the streams and in the woods, so attractive to boyhood life.

The ties of blood are supposed to be strong and enduring, and yet they are often a burlesque unless sealed by the ties of friendship. Brothers drift apart, and it frequently happens that the distances which separate them are no greater than the chasm which exists between them because they have nothing in common, and friendship never existed.

A time ago, two brothers, past middle life, stood at the grave side of their father, impressed by the reverence and homage paid to his memory by the community where he had lived. The boys had been gone from the old home, for many years, but the father's love had followed them, and helped them over many tight places. As they left the spot, where the casket rested one of them said to the other, "We never knew our father." And the other said, "That's true!" There are too many boys who fail to cultivate friendship with their fathers, and too many fathers who fail to appreciate the fact that the boy would rather have his father for a comrade and close companion, than anyone else. That those intimate relations do not more generally exist is to be regretted, and they would, if the average father appreciated their importance.

But Mr. Stephens had in mind the way that individual success affects the three classes of people who profess friendship. It hardly seems possible that anyone could be mean enough to envy the success of a friend, and yet this is one of the common weaknesses of humanity.

This same spirit is at times manifest in community life, and our home city has not been free from it. The late George L. Carrington, who some years ago stirred up the dry bones and gave the city new life, was so cleverly envied that his methods were copied and sub-divisions blossomed in all directions. Opposition and lack of support drove Mr. Carrington from the field, and the city settled back to old-time lethargy.

Envy is bad for the individual and bad for a city. It inspires covetousness, and crime is the natural result. When a man covets his neighbor's property to the extent of appropriating it, he becomes a law-breaker and may be punished, but it is perfectly safe to envy and covet another's reputation and success, and keep within the written law, and this is often done, but results are always harmful. The notion is more or less popular that money is the best friend that a man ever had, and that a liberal supply of it, liberally spent, insures friendship.

The young man who steps up to the bar and invites everybody in the room to join him in a drink, imagines that he has made a friend of every man present, and if he follows up the practice he soon enlists a noisy constituency, shouting his praises, but when funds are exhausted he joins the common herd of bar-room loafers, and is speedily forgotten.

What is true of the man at the bar, with a roll of money, is largely true of the family in society with a good bank account, and a disposition to spend it. Hale fellows well met, while the money lasts, and but of little account when it is gone. Money is a good friend, but not a reliable friend-maker.

The steadfast friends are the few people who know us well, through long years of pleasant association, and who take us as they find us in either success or failure. This kind of friendship does not develop in a night, and it can not be shattered by a single blast.

In every community are found old men and old women who are left to trudge along the descending pathway alone. The old home and the close companion who shared it, are sacred memories, and the friends of other years have finished their pilgrimage. There is a world of pathos in the wrinkled faces of these weary sojourners, and it is not surprising that at times they anticipate with eager longing the home and companionship of the life beyond.

True friendship is a rare jewel, not always appreciated, and yet the friendly spirit, which prompts philanthropy, and brings joy and comfort to humanity, is abroad in the land. We may share it, if we will as both giver and receiver, and thus secure a two-fold benediction.

SCRIPTURE

LEVITICUS 19:11-18.

Ye shall not steal, neither deal falsely, neither lie one to another. And ye shall not swear by my name falsely, neither shall thou profane the name of thy God: I am the Lord. Thou shalt not defraud thy neighbor, neither rob him: the wages of him that is hired shall not abide with thee all night until the morning. Thou shalt not curse the deaf, nor put a stumblingblock before the blind, but shalt fear thy God: I am the Lord. Ye shall do no unrighteousness in judgment: thou shalt not respect the person of the poor, nor honor the person of the mighty; but in righteousness shalt thou judge thy neighbor.

Thou shalt not go up and down as a talebearer among thy people: neither shalt thou stand against the blood of thy neighbor: I am the Lord.

Thou shalt not hate thy brother in thine heart: thou shalt in any wise rebuke thy neighbor, and not suffer sin upon him. Thou shalt not avenge, nor bear any grudge against the children of thy people, but thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself: I am the Lord.

There's Music In Everything.
And sure there is music even in the beauty and the silent note which Cupid strikes, far sweeter than the sound of an instrument; for there is music wherever there is harmony, order or proportion; and thus far we may maintain the music of the spheres.—Sir Thomas Browne.

ON THE SPUR OF THE MOMENT

By ROY K. MOULTON.

From the Hickeyville Clarion.

Mr. Zebulun Hickey, the talented and versatile superintendent and hired man of Mr. Elias Handy's agricultural estate, had labored since sunrise the other day and when night came he was very weary. He had been scratching the earth with an old hoe and had jabbed away with this implement of torture until every bone in his body ached like the toothache.

With the setting of the sun he hastened to his boudoir under the apex of the roof of the ancestral castle of Mr. Handy, gleefully shaking off the shackles of toil, a pair of blue overalls and leaped playfully into bed. He did not crawl in as ordinary mortals do, but leaped over the footboard, having taken a running jump. Mr. Hickey was not conversant with the fact that Mrs. Handy the cheerful and spick-and-span helpmeet of the lord of the manor, had removed the vital portions of said bed, even unto the springs and slats, for the purpose of airing them, and had forgotten to replace them. What Mr. Hickey thought was a regular bed was only the frame of one and when he leaped over the footboard, head first, he went clear through the floor, shooting through the air like a meteor cast off the great Mars.

Mr. Hickey struck the floor with a thud that has been described as dull and sickening. He broke a collar bone and ten commandments, and the old hoe knows his friendly grasp no more. Mr. Hickey is recovering rapidly and will be out in a few days. MORAL: Look before you leap. Mr. Rufus Doolittle has just completed an invention known as The Animated Work Harness and expects to make a fortune out of it, which he probably will if it sells well. The harness works by electricity and when a button is pressed, it jumps off the harness hook and lands squarely on the back of the horse, said horse having been led out to the middle of the barn. The harness then proceeds to buckle itself on and hitch itself to the wagon when the horse has been backed into the stalls. Mr. Doolittle claims that this is one of the most wonderful inventions since the patent elastic sleeveholder, which came out in 1894, and no doubt it is. Mr. Doolittle expects to try out his new device next week and see how it will work.

Why Suffer From Heat.
There are so many ways to avoid it. For instance: Go for a long cruise on the ocean in a steam yacht. Travel up around Labrador and Iceland. Lie in a hammock all day beneath a spreading apple tree with a tall pitcher of lemonade by your side. Have large electric fans in every room in the house and stand beneath Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

YOUNG OLD FOLKS.

Uncle Joe Cannon, at the age of seventy-five, is as spry as a boy. At about the same age Chauncey Depew walks Broadway as straight as an Indian.

Chief Justice Harlan, at seventy-eight, recently wrote his famous dissenting opinion in the Standard Oil case.

Edison says he is just beginning at seventy to live and learn and is planning ahead thirty years.

Wu Ting Fang, the famous Chinese diplomat, says a man should be his best as seventy—as betts.

Although he is ninety-one, Dr. Daniel K. Pearsons, the philanthropist, says he feels in his heart all the thrills of youth.

Shelby M. Cullom, at eighty-one, represents the state of Illinois in the senate and is soon to begin writing a history of his times.

John Bigelow, our former minister to France, at ninety-four is writing a history of the tariff.

Isaac Johnson, who invented Portland cement, is 100 years old. He recently began to translate the gospel of St. John from the Greek.

Susan B. Anthony, who died at eighty-six, within a year of her death always ran upstairs like a girl.

Now—What is the secret of the longevity of these young old persons?

Chiefly this: They did not grow old in mind or dull in spirit. They kept in close touch with the ongoing of things.

They refused to be pushed into the chimney corner.

Would you stay young through the advancing years? Then select some work that will stimulate your hope and stir your enthusiasm. Let that work lead you as your task led you in the days of your youth.

Spend no time in regrets over the road by which you have come. Look at the road ahead of you.

And, above all, continue to think. When the life sap quits going to your head you will begin to die at the top, like certain trees.

Accustom yourself to the spirit of progress. Stay young in soul. Cultivate the spiritual part of you and thus put about your gray hairs the halo of eternal youth.

Photographic Map of the Sky. A photographic map of the entire sky, showing approximately 1,500,000 stars, has been prepared in sections by the astronomers of Harvard university. The whole map would cover more than five acres.

BELOIT ASSESSMENT HAS BIG INCREASE SAYS F. A. TAYLOR

Valuation Shows Jump of Two and a Half Millions, Making Difference Between Two Cities Proportionate.

F. A. Taylor, income tax assessor and supervisor of assessment for Rock county, submitted a statement to the Gazette today in regard to the figures showing a comparison of the assessed valuation between Beloit and Janesville. Mr. Taylor points to the fact that the valuation of Beloit property has been increased this year over last by two and a half million and more by the city's own assessors, which tends to make the difference between the two cities nearly proportionate with former years. Mr. Taylor says, however, that he believed it wholly reasonable that the Beloit valuation "should not only be assessed as high as Janesville, but considerably in excess of Janesville, existing conditions warranting that view." Mr. Taylor's statement, which is of interest to all property owners, is given below:

"In last night's issue of the Janesville Daily Gazette figures are given comparing the assessed value of real and personal property in the City of Beloit for 1912 with that of the City of Janesville, showing the burden to be on the City of Janesville to the amount of $2,942,219.00.

"In this comparison the figures given for the assessed value of the City of Janesville for 1912 are virtually the same as that placed by the State Tax Commission's Assessors in the reassessment of the City of Janesville last fall. Beloit's valuation for 1912 being placed by its own City Assessors.

"The assessment of the City of Beloit for 1911 shows an aggregate value of $5,443,398.00 and the first assessment of the City of Janesville for 1911 shows an aggregate value of $10,828,405.00, an exact difference of $1,585,007.00 over that of the City of Beloit for 1911, then came the second or reassessment of the City of Janesville by the State Tax Commission's Assessors last fall, placing the aggregate for the City of Janesville for 1911 in excess of $15,000,000.00.

"Beloit's assessment for 1912 is $12,089,082.00, while its assessment for 1911 was but $9,443,398.00, showing an increase of the aggregate value for 1912 of $2,645,684.00, this advance having been made by its local assessors.

"If the City of Beloit had been reassessed by the State Tax Commission it is reasonable to assume that its aggregate value for the year 1912 would have reached or perhaps exceeded that of the City of Janesville, but it must be remembered that an assessment made by men sent in from a different community where friendship and sentiment is eliminated would be vastly different from that made by local men and the Beloit Assessors are entitled to great credit for their work of 1912 which shows the substantial increase of $2,645,684.00 over 1911.

"Furthermore it is shown from the first assessments in 1911 of the Cities of Beloit and Janesville, that Janesville exceeded Beloit $1,885,007.00 and in the comparisons given by the Gazette for 1912 it appears that Janesville suffers to the extent of $2,942,219.00. If before the reassessment of Janesville, Beloit was entitled to be assessed $1,885,007.00 less than Janesville, would she not be entitled to it now and if so, great credit for their work of 1912 which shows the substantial increase of $2,645,684.00 over 1911, would be $1,557,219.00 instead of $2,942,219.00, but it is wholly reasonable to believe that Beloit should not only be assessed as high as Janesville but considerable in excess of Janesville, existing conditions warranting that view."

The players are "Bunty Pulls the Strings" is a perfect joy, a delight from the moment when the curtain first rises on the affairs of the Tammam Biggar, elder of the kirk, on a Sunday morning, until Bunty succeeds in untangling them to the satisfaction of all those concerned save the meddlesome old maid from whom the managing daughter saves her widowed father.

ELABORATE OUTFIT FOR HORSE TRADER

Dick Joles of Henry, Ill., Buys Equipment for Long Cross Country Trips of Janesville Firms.

One of the most elaborate vehicles of its kind in the country, and the finest ever turned out by the Janesville Carriage company, is the caravan of traveling wagon delivered by the company today to Dick Joles of Henry, Marshall county, Illinois. Mr. Joles, who is a dealer in horses, has visited this city annually for the past eighteen years, clumping near the four mile bridge. The cost of the vehicle was about five or six hundred dollars.

The vehicle is to be used by Mr. Joles and his wife in their rambles about the country, and will be utilized by them at the Illinois state fair at Springfield. They spend the winter months of the year in the south, and the wagon will probably be shipped down the Mississippi river when Mr. and Mrs. Joles make their annual trip this coming winter. It is fitted out complete in every respect and no expense has been made for convenience or to make it appear attractive.

The interior is varnished and stained a cherry red and is roomy enough for sleeping quarters. Back of the driver's seat is a compartment for carrying clothing and place is provided in the wagon for the storing of provisions. The wagon is equipped with colored glass doors on the front, rear and sides to admit the passage of air through the car. The exterior is most ornately decorated. The running gear is yellow with stripes of red, and the body is painted red and ornamented with United States shields and other designs. Oil paintings of water scenes have been painted on the canvas of the sides of the carriage. Nickel trimmings also go with the outfit.

To match up with the wagon, Mr. Joles has had made to order in this city by the John C. Nichols Harness company, a heavy set of harness for his team, the leader being studded with nickel trimmings. His expenditures for his outfit in this city total in the neighborhood of a thousand dollars.

D. W. WATT

Tells of Harry Everts' Sad Death--
A Georgian Experience

For several years with the Forepaugh show a young man by the name of Harry Everts was press agent during the summer and at the close of the season would go on to Chicago and act as press agent for the Cole and Middleton Museum. In the spring I would join him in Chicago and we would go down to Philadelphia to the show together.

The spring of the terrible railroad accident at Ashtabula, Ohio, he had made arrangements to go on with me and I left Chicago two weeks before that accident. Cole and Middleton wanted him to stay as long as he could and as there was no particular work for him to do till the show opened he concluded to stay with them as long as possible.

Harry left Chicago on the ill-fated train and lost his life in the wreck. He was pinned in between some seats and timbers with only one hand loose and he was crushed and burned to death. His wife had died two years before and left him with a boy about eight years of age, who lived in Buffalo with his wife's mother.

Persons who were fortunate enough to escape tried in ever way to release him, but to no avail, and just before he died he happened to think of a life insurance policy of $5,000 which he had taken out for the boy and had in his little grip at his side. As one of the persons grabbed the grip and pulled it out of the fire the last thing poor Harry said was "Look for the life insurance," and on opening his valise they found the $5,000 policy there made out for his son.

Harry Everts was a high class newspaper man, never without work and always commanding a big salary, and but few men in the show business had more friends or were better known.

Late in the season of this year we took in some of the principal towns in the South and on a Saturday showed in Atlanta, Georgia. Back in the war of rebellion I had an older brother killed a mile and a half in front of Atlanta and later was taken to Marietta and buried there in the national cemetery.

Saturday evening I had a talk with the landlord in the hotel at Atlanta and asked him if it would be possible for me to go over to Marietta, and spend the day there, which was Sunday and get over to Rome, Georgia Sunday night. He looked over the railroad guide and told me that I could get a train Sunday morning from Atlanta going up to Marietta, which was only 20 miles, and I got a train out of Marietta at four o'clock in the evening for Rome, Georgia.

I said nothing to anyone around the show but looked up the wagon Saturday night went to the hotel and stayed over night and took the eight o'clock train to Marietta. Arriving there I went to the national cemetery met the superintendent and was his guest for the day. At four o'clock he drove into town and I took the train as I supposed for Rome. About 8 o'clock in the evening the conductor said, "Everybody out, this is as far as we go." I said to him, "Is this Rome, Georgia?" He said, "No sir, this is eighteen miles from Rome."

It was about the middle of November, quite cold and rainy. There were not more than a dozen houses in this town and a little hotel and no chance for me to get over to Rome. There was a train going over the next day at one o'clock, but I had to be there at nine o'clock in the morning.

About ten o'clock a typical southerner came into the little hotel and he and the landlord talked a while and he came over to me and said that Col. so and so in the town had a pony and open buggy. He said, "I don't reckon mister, that it is much of a rig but if I can borrow it I will be glad to take you down the mountains to Rome." In about half an hour he arrived with a little, old, rickety buggy and a small, old pony that had seen better days. The landlord gave us an umbrella and we started down through the mountains for Rome.

We would first hit on one side and get onto the road and go for a short distance when we would get out of the road again. My newly made friend said to me, "There is something wrong here. He said, 'I've got a spark under the seat and I will get it out and see what's the matter.'"

He went under the seat and pulled out the lantern and went around in front of the buggy and looked it over and said, "I'm afraid we are in bad shape. Our headlights are both out."

But we pushed on toward Rome after going down the mountains for about six miles we heard the terrible roar of water. I said to him "Now don't drive into that until we find out something about how deep it is."

He said, "You get very easy, sir, very easy, for I know every foot of this country and this is only a dry stream."

"Well," I said to him, "That may be all right in this country. When water makes such a noise up north we don't call it a dry stream."

But he assured me it would be all right and drove in. The water came up in the body of the buggy but the pony took us through and we started up a steep incline on the other side. But the soil was all wet clay. After going about half way up the hill we commenced to slip and we started back into the water. My friend jumped of the buggy and told me to keep driving and he pushed the buggy till we finally landed on top of the hill. He said to me, "This is certainly quite an experience" for it was raining hard all the time. I said to him, "Yes, if anybody had told me back in the early sixties that I ever would come down at midnight in the Georgia woods with a rebel I would not have believed it."

"Well," he said, "You Yankees were making it very uncomfortable for us about that time."

But we started on for Rome and just as it commenced to break daylight in the morning we drove up in front of the hotel and told the landlord we wanted a warm room where we could dry our clothes and call us at nine and have two good breakfasts ready for us. After breakfast we went out on the street and I said to him, "I am not going to allow you to drive this pony back. I am going to send you back on the train. Show me the first man you see that you can depend on and I will hire him to take the pony back."

About that time he called a young colored boy from across the street and he said to me, "There is a boy that is thoroughly reliable." I asked the boy what he would charge me for taking Col. so and so's pony back home and with a twinkle in his eye he said, "Boss it would be just the same as walking." And I agreed with him and gave him $3 to drive the pony back home.

I took my new southern friend on down to the show where he had dinner and supper with me at the cook tent. I introduced him to everybody around the show and he stayed with me till 12 o'clock that night. When he bade me goodbye he said, "If I live to be forty years old I will never forget last night and today. This has certainly been an experience I can never forget and if you ever want to send any roses or flowers of any kind to be placed on your brother's grave, send them to me and I will plant them tenderly as one friend should for another."

But the train pulled out and I have never seen nor heard from him since, and the show closed its season there at Rome, Georgia.

The story of "Graustark" is of an American, Grenville Lorry, who falls madly in love with a princess in America, who is traveling incognito. He follows her to her home in Edgerton, Graustark where he and his

a story of an American bravado with enough serious moments to make it appreciable, and excitement enough to keep the attention tense most of the time.

The characters and the country "Graustark" are mythical, but the story contains so much human interest and so many of the things a man will really do for the woman he loves. It is absorbingly interesting. Every character of the novel is full of dramatic intensity, and Grace Hayward, who dramatized the same, has faithfully transplanted every possible incident from the book to the stage.

There is romanticism about plays of royalty which, properly presented stage settings and correct costumes, and interpreted by actors who render their parts in a capable manner, make it entertaining and fascinating to the fullest extent.

"BUNTY PULLS THE STRINGS."
The sale of seats for "Bunty Pulls the Strings" which comes to Myers theatre on Tuesday Sept. 17 will open Tuesday evening. It goes without saying that no play of the last decade has created the same interest among theatregoers as "Bunty." Almost unheeded it came to this country and immediately created a profound impression, so much so that Colliers Theatre in New York has been crowded to its utmost capacity since last October, and seats are selling many months in advance. A second company was brought from Scotland and sent to Chicago. The secret of its greatness lies in the fact that it is different from all plays that have gone before. In its very simplicity, it is all about a simple church-going folk in the Highlands of West Scotland, and bares to the bone, Scotch wit and Scotch common sense.

OFFICER 666

When a police succumbs to the allurements of a $500 bill and consents to loan his uniform and dignity to a perfect stranger, he cannot expect much sympathy from his superior officers. This is what happens in the farce, "Officer 666," but as this particular blue coat has come to be a huge success with the theatre going public he can afford to laugh at the gibes of his brothers of the night stick brigade.

"Officer 666" is one of the big play successes that will be seen here this coming season.

"OLIVER TWIST."

Following the example of Sarah Bernhardt and Rejane the famous comedienne, Nat C. Goodwin has had himself embalmed for posterity by the moving picture camera, and will be seen at Pugin, the Jew, in "Oliver Twist" at the Myers Theatre two days beginning Saturday September 14.

Mr. Goodwin and his company have been playing in this piece at the New Amsterdam theatre in New York city with conspicuous success. Although Mr. Goodwin is the only one of the all star cast, which appear in the revival to be seen in the pictures, the other characters are splendidly taken, and the films themselves are remarkably clear and distinct, having been taken with the theatre especially lighted for this purpose.

It gives one quite a thrill to think that in years to come it will be possible to look upon these same moving photographs and see every subtle facial expression and gesture on the part of Mr. Goodwin in this, one of the most malignant and malevolent characters in all fiction. His make-up for the part is all that the imagination can conjure up, it is in fact, the real Dickens idea of the man whose name has since become a synonym for all others who have taught youth to steal.

BEAT PROGRESSIVES IN CAL. PRIMARIES

Joseph R. Knowland and Julius Kahn.

Among the Taft Republican congressional candidates who defeated their Progressive opponents in the recent California primaries were Joseph R. Knowland, of Alameda, and Julius Kahn, of San Francisco. Knowland has represented his district in the lower house for nearly ten years, while Kahn has been in congress since 1899, except for the two years following March 4, 1903. Both men represent districts strongly Republican.

VIOLA ALLEN NOT A "STAR" THIS YEAR

Viola Allen.

Viola Allen, the popular American actress, will have to forego the name distinction that goes with the name "star" this season. Her name will not be blazed out in electric letters before the theater door. She has been chosen for the role in "The Daughter of Heaven," a French play, and the management has determined that there shall be no stars and that the play will be "the thing."

Only One Coupon Is Necessary Now

PRESENT IT AT THE GAZETTE OFFICE AND, WITH A LITTLE CASH, GET A DICTIONARY.

The Gazette Office has been congratulated on every side on account of its handsome offer of the best book of reference published in exchange for six consecutive coupons and a small expense bonus.

A great many people eagerly grasped that opportunity.

The dictionary distribution is to close in a few days, however, and in order to bring it to a brisk wind-up and give its readers, more benefit than ever, the Gazette has abandoned the six-coupon plan, and now only one coupon is required.

To save time, it is said, is to lengthen life.

Here is chance for you to save time and trouble also.

No one can afford to overlook this opportunity to increase his earning capacity as the result of the minimum effort required to secure one coupon and the slight expense of the bonus required.

If you take advantage of this offer, you will come more nearly to getting something for nothing than you ever did before, or probably ever will again.

Do not delay, as the close is only a few days away.

Clip that coupon and profit by the six-in-one proposition.

Ask your friend that got one of the books about it.

Then profit by your tardiness and get one for a coupon.

All explained under the dictionary coupon printed elsewhere in this issue.

This dictionary is NOT published by the original publishers of Webster's Dictionary or by their successors.

The most noticeable variation in money rates at the world's money centers this week, was in New York where both call and time money was from 1/2 to 1% higher than a week ago. The statement that the United States government stands ready to relieve the strained situation by depositing some $5,000,000 with the banks has given the situation a more hopeful aspect than otherwise would have been the case. This is the usual procedure on the part of the government when conditions like the present arise. However, because of unusual conditions which exist at the present time, such action may ultimately only aggravate the situation. The outlook in New York is for irregularity in rates during the coming thirty days in the stock market.

THE STOCK MARKET.
The bulk of the news this week, to influence prices, has been favorable. The Steel Corporation's report of unfilled tonnage as of September 1st indicates that that company is doing the biggest business in its history. The government's grain crop report gives evidence that this year the total agricultural yield will be greater than ever before. The copper market continues stable at a high price for the metal. The political outlook is satisfactory. As against this news there is but one discouraging factor: that is, the financial situation. And inasmuch as stocks continue to seek a lower level it would seem that this factor is of greater importance to prices than all other factors combined. For this reason careful consideration must be given the financial situation.

At the present time the New York banks are undergoing a heavy strain as a result of the demand for money not only for crop moving purposes, but also to carry on the country's commercial and industrial business which has increased as a result of the enormous prospective agricultural yield. The outlook is for high money rates into October. About that time the money from the crops will begin to return to New York. In the meantime, the market bids fair to seek a lower level until more satisfactory conditions develop; however, the present business activity will later on be reflected in larger earnings for both the railroad and industrial companies.

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

Southern Pacific.—This company reports an increase in the net income for the month of July of $745,913. Earnings during the past year, applicable to dividends on the stock showed a satisfactory margin of safety over the 6% dividends now being paid. Increased net earnings this year should result in an increase in the dividend rate. The situation in Mexico may bring about a temporary decline in this issue but, in my opinion, such a decline will be an opportunity to buy a splendid investment stock, cheap.

Denver & Rio Grande.—This company's report for the year ending June 30, 1912, shows net earnings equal to 2.26% on the preferred stock as compared with 4.98% last year. The obligations which this road has assumed account of the Western Pacific would seem to eliminate any possibility for dividends on D. & R. G. preferred for several years to come. For this reason these shares have little speculative value.

ENGLAND IS SOLVING ITS TRAMP PROBLEM

"Way Ticket" Method of Dealing With Vagrancy Said To Be Accomplishing A Revolution.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
London, Eng., Sept. 9.—The tramp problem in the British Isles is in a fair way towards solution. "True way ticket" method of dealing with vagrancy is accomplishing a revolution. The latest reports on the working of the system indicate that within a very few years the ranks of the ragged mendicants on the highways of the United Kingdom will be reduced almost to a vanishing point.

The object of the "way ticket" is to give a better chance to the unemployed who really want work, and to make the way of the professional tramp as hard as possible. The man who wants to work but is compelled to take to the road is taken into the poorhouse at night and released next morning instead of suffering the usual period of detention. When leaving he is given a ticket which entitles him to a certain allowance of bread and cheese along the road he intends to take. He is also put in touch with the local labor exchanges and everything possible is done for him if he shows a genuine desire to obtain work.

On the other hand, the habitual tramp obtains short shift. After spending the night at the poorhouse he suffers the usual period of detention and gets the allotted task. Finally he is given the "way ticket" so that he has no excuse for begging. Very soon the poorhouse masters begin to look askance at the man who persistently presents the ticket and his journey from the village to village and from poorhouse to poorhouse in the counties where the system prevails is not made any too smooth. The tramp finally seeks a county where this method does not prevail, so these authorities are beginning to adopt the system in self-defense.

The system only becomes successful when the householders co-operate. Circulars are issued instructing them that, since all vagrants have access to the bread tickets, there is no excuse for giving food to beggars, and the tramps who neglect to provide themselves with the tickets are beginning to learn that the circulars have not fallen on barren soil.

The difficulties of the clergyman and social reformers of more enlightened countries in their efforts to compel the fair sex to put more cloth into their skirts pale into insignificance beside the troubles of the local governor of Inhambane, British East Africa, who has almost caused a war by ordering the native maidens to attire themselves in European garb.

The order particularly insisted that the native women should not appear in public without skirts under pain of some grave penalty not specified.

Never was an apparently innocent sumptuary law received with such an outburst of rebellion. The Commercial Council resigned in a body and the Indian storekeepers who deal in the articles of attire favored by the native ladies threatened to shut up shops in protest. The native belles took even more drastic action by refusing to come near Inhambane at all, with the result that the town was soon in danger of a famine in vegetables, eggs, poultry and other necessary food supplies. The women who lived in town prepared to leave.

The opposition became too hot for the governor, who withdrew the obnoxious decree, and the belles of Inhambane again go about in their scant costumes.

The London Shakespeare League is busy with a plan for erecting in St. Leonard's Church, Shoreditch, a tablet to the memory of the Elizabethan actors buried there. It is usual to think of Southwark Cathedral as the actor's church, for it is there that Edmund, the brother and fellow-actor of Shakespeare, lies buried. But the first theatres were near Shoreditch and it is there that the early actors lie at rest. All traces of the theatres have disappeared from the district; but like many places in London, one of the unlabeled streets perpetuates the memory of departed things by the name of Curtain street.

The original actors' church disappeared early in the eighteenth century, when Dance designed the present structure to take its place. The actors' graves have been preserved, but their names remain on the parish register. Among them are those of Will Somers, who delighted Henry VIII, and his court, and who is believed to have been the original Yorick; and James Burbage, who built the first English theatre, and his brother Richard, friend of Shakespeare. Still another name recalling the Elizabethan thespians, is cut in gilt letters on the altar, that of Nicholas Wilkinson, alias Tooley, an actor who Shakespeare knew. He left thirty dollars to be distributed each year to the poor of the parish. The poor get the money to this day, so one actor at least is not forgotten.

The craze in London for regulation has reached the clocks. Hereafter according to a ukase of the Corporation of the City, all public timepieces must be synchronous.

London's clocks generally have never been noted for timekeeping and the new regulation means that most of them will have to turn over a new leaf if they expect to synchronize with Greenwich time. Only three of the great clocks have proven themselves models of accuracy—those of St. Paul's Cathedral, the Law Courts, and Big Ben in Westminster Palace. A couple of the street clocks prove that it is the simplest thing in the world to lose or gain time. By walking a block the pedestrian could gain anything from thirty seconds to two hours or he might lose as much. Four minutes could be gained by crossing Fleet street from one newspaper office to another, while a sporting paper on the same street had evidently started its racing season by being five minutes ahead of Greenwich time.

St. Margaret's, which from its ecclesiastical associations would be expected to be truthful, was three minutes ahead of time, notwithstanding the reproachful looks of accurate Big Ben across the way.

Indeed, there seemed to be a conspiracy of disagreement among London clocks and on no street could more than two clocks be found to coincide.

FORMER LAWRENCE STUDENT HURT IN SOUTHERN RACE WAR

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Appleton, Sept. 14.—As a result of a miniature race war at Forrest City, Arkansas, Ward Ostranger, formerly of Omro, and a well known Lawrence college student who is now superintendent of the Jones Lumber Company's Cotton plantation in Forrest City, passed through this city on his way to Rochester, Minn., to the Mayo Bros' hospital for an operation to have two bullets removed from his body. Ostranger gave a negro orders to do some work. The man sulked and later while Ostranger was passing a cabin which contained three negroes and their wench, he was shot. He was in a hospital for six weeks and will now undergo an operation. He is well known in Wisconsin.

FRENCH OFFICERS MUST RESIGN FROM SOCIETIES

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Paris, Sept. 14.—Officer of the French army reserve have been given by the Minister of War the choice of resigning their membership in certain societies or losing their commissions. Alexander Millerand has just sent a circular to reserve officers all over the country pointing out that membership of the so-called military leagues is incompatible with discipline. One of the leagues is Masonic and other anti-Masonic, and they had their origin in more or less harmless societies for the promotion of comradeship, but each of them has acquired an aggressive political character within recent years.

RAILWAY BRAKEMAN HAS A MIRACULOUS ESCAPE

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Manitowoc, Sept. 14.—Al. Winters, a brakeman in the local yards of the C. & N. W. railway, had a miraculous escape from death late yesterday afternoon when he was caught under a freight car when it was derailed and embedded in the bank at the side of the track. Winters was on the ladder at the side of the car and was caught in the iron rungs and held a prisoner under the car which was embedded in the bank. It required three men eight minutes to dig Winters out. He escaped with only a few bruises.

BECOMES ROMAN CATHOLIC BISHOP OF ANTIGONISH.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Antigonish, N. S., Sept. 14.—Roman Catholic prelates and priests from many dioceses today attended the consecration of Rev. Dr. James D. Morrison, formerly vicar general of the diocese of Charlottetown, as Bishop of Antigonish, in succession to Bishop Cameron, who died about two years ago. The consecrating prelate was Monsignor Stagni, the apostolic delegate to Canada, who was assisted by Archbishops McCarthy of Halifax and Casey of St. John. The new bishop is a native of Tracadie, N. S., and was educated in Charlottetown and at the College of Propaganda in Rome. After his ordination to the priesthood he became rector of St. Dunstan's College, Charlottetown, and afterwards rector of St. Dunstan's Cathedral.

ATTRACTIVE FALL ATTIRE for the House and Street

Copyright 1912 by I. J. Robinson.

FOR several seasons past the designers of fashions have launched their modish creations without giving them a family name, so to speak. Like the great artists whose masterpieces are forever nameless, they have been content to base their appeal on our individual imaginations; we have caught quaint suggestions of the prim Colonial days; we have seemed to breathe the exotic atmosphere of the Orient, and we have been enchanted with the revived charm of the days of Louis XV.

This season, however, we hear little talked about but Directoire modes. Suits and gowns and the infinite accessories of dress all bear the impress of this influence, modified, of course, and made to embrace many attractive features that have survived the caprices of fashion.

The most notable characteristic of the newest suits designed along these lines is the Robespierre collar. This style of collar appeared in much of the summer neckwear, but it has been most cleverly adapted to fall and winter suits. Occasionally one sees it quite unmodified—that is, in the form of a high, standing turn-down collar that reaches only around the back to the ears and is supplemented by revers; but for the most part the latest collars resemble more a modified Byron collar. The over-collar is often of a darker shade of velvet than the suit, or may be of a lighter shade of broadcloth. Light broadcloths are used a great deal for the little vest effects that are well liked in suits of this design, some of the vests being made detachable.

Sleeves continue to be of the set-in variety, those in the separate coats having generally the deep armhole.

BELETED AND SHIRRED EFFECTS PROMINENT.

In length the suit coats vary from 28 to 33 inches, according to the size of the garment. Cutaway styles are very prominent, and there is a tendency to the elongation of the back, in many of the smartest models.

The most striking novelty of the new suit, and coats is the use of belted and shirred effects. What is sometimes called the Prince George back is especially popular. This has a slight fullness above and below the waist gathered into a half-belt that is sometimes curved upward just a little. The waist line, however, is kept normal in nearly all garments; indeed, there is an increasing tendency to follow more closely the lines of the figure than has been done for some time.

It has required the exercise of amazing ingenuity on the part of the costumers to introduce a considerably greater amount of material into their suits and gowns, and still maintain the slender silhouette to which the woman of fashion is devoted. The pleated skirt appears often in the fall and winter models, but there is little suggestion of the old style kilted skirts so universally worn a few years ago. The pleats are scant and flat and usually extend only from the knees to the skirt edge. Various novel adaptations of the tunic, with now and then a suggested panier arrangement, in combination with these kick pleats, are the distinctive features of the new models.

A clever use of pleats was noticed on a suit of blue diagonal, designed for street wear. Three side turning pleats extended from the collar, in the back, to the bottom of the coat. The similar pleats in the back of the skirt were stitched flat to within about six inches of the hem, when they were allowed to fly, the same idea being carried out in the front.

On the same order was a trim black serge suit which had the edges of the narrower pleats, that were laid in slot fashion down the back of both coat and skirt, bound with black braid. This is a very popular trimming feature just now, seen on many of the best suits.

It was strikingly employed on a suit of grey whipcord, being used to blind the edge of the jacket and on the edges of a couple of pleats down the back of the skirt which were arranged in such a way as to resemble the style of the jacket in the front. Crystal buttons fastened the jacket at the waist line.

The tenacity with which taffeta clings to fashion's fancy is evidenced by the inlays of it one sees on some of the collars of the less strictly tailored suits. A navy blue suit of the modish wide wale diagonal was given an interesting touch by the use of chameleon taffeta on the collar. The half belt across the back that held the meager gathers in place further suggested an actual belt effect by the pearl buckle set a little to one side. The skirt was quite plain except for small kick pleats laid in panel style.

PANIER ARE VARIED.

Panier effects are well adapted to the suits of velvet that will appear a little later on, their popularity unabated. Particularly graceful was a model in dull bronze brown velvet. The jacket had a deep collar with wide revers, and was pulled into a belt of embroidered silk, having threads of copper through it, which met leather belt straps at the sides. The skirt of the jacket was lifted slightly at the edge and pulled onto the wide band of stitched velvet that encircled the collar, cuffs, and bottom of the coat. A similar band was carried down the side of the skirt and about the bottom, with the skirt falling over it easily in panier effect.

Another development of the panier motif was worked into a broadcloth suit of Jasper green. The paniers over each hip, very scant and soft, were shirred under the apron like tunic that was plain save for an inverted back pleat and two pleats from the knee down, at either side. The straight, standing collar of the coat was of braid embroidered silk, as was the narrow straight vest, the wide cuffs and false pockets on either side.

Prophetic of the passing of the one-sided effects are the suits which button straight up the front. The high closing is seen on many attractive suits also, as well as on the majority of the separate coats.

FEATURES OF THE NEW COATS.

Coats show little that is new for the winter season, most of them having the characteristics of the late summer models. They are usually made up from rough materials, such as chinchilla and bouclé, fabrics having a diagonal weave being particularly favored. Some of the bouclé coats have collars of plush, and the chinchilla coats are likewise relieved with collars and cuffs of plush, or chinchilla of a contrasting shade. Shawl collars and wide cuffs are in good style, but the high-buttoned effects will prove both fashionable and practicable for severe weather.

Deep-cut armholes are used almost entirely on the separate coats, the square armhole representing the latest development of this style.

One of the most attractive coats that has been shown this season was a tan chinchilla that had a collar and revers made in one piece, of brown broadcloth, the revers being very wide and extending over the shoulder to form a large sailor collar, which was somewhat deeper at the left. This oblique edge of the collar emphasized the one-side effect. The coat fastened low at the front, with two large fancy buttons, set close together—a way of placing buttons that is a feature of fall novelties.

Added warmth is given to many of the coats which are made up in the shonider cape style. One might easily dispense with furs when wearing one of these comfortable garments. A good-looking one of gray zibeline had a pointed shoulder cape with cutaway effect in the front. The cape was lined with a bright blue chiffon broadcloth, and the buttons and straps that trimmed the coat were attractively piped with the broadcloth also.

DIRECTOIRE MODES PREVAIL.

In gowns, as well as suits and outer garments, the Directoire note prevails, dividing honors with the panier styles. Close fitting skirts that reveal the form from waist to feet, and having moderate trains, are being worn by women who are always gowned according to the latest dictates of fashion.

A chic little gown, illustrating the latitude which couturiers permit themselves, had the waist in the Directoire style—the wide pointed revers and collar reaching only to the shoulders—while the skirt was a panier model; fastened down the side with ball buttons and draped over an accordionpleated foundation. The accordion pleating came well above the knees and had a row of the buttons set on a band of the same material as the collar extending down the left side. These accordion pleated skirts are cleverly shaped so that they cling to the figure almost as closely as the scant models.

The sleeves of this gown, like those of nearly all the fall models, were long. A new feature of sleeve treatment is the shirred under cuff of net. Tiny frills about the hand, and carried up the outer seam of the sleeve are quaintly becoming.

Frills are used quite extensively on some of the afternoon and evening frocks, although always arranged in such manner as absolutely to maintain narrow lines. A lovely French model, having a tunic skirt and surplice waist effect, had row upon row of striped taffeta ruffles that tapered up to the point of crossing of the tunic, midway between the knee and the waist line.

Worsted voile, in a beautiful shade of old blue, was used for a three-piece costume designed for early fall wear. The skirt was in panier style, with a foundation of finely pleated voile, put straight about the bottom and just below the knees. Down one side of the waist and the skirt was a band of deep cerise velvet, toned down by small out, was of soft, white satin, brocaded with sprigs of tiny, old-fashioned flowers. The skirt was looped up in little paniers in the front, that reached to the knee, while the back hung full from the rather long waistline. The prettily draped up paniers disclosed an underskirt of soft white silk with rows of five-inch shadow lace, one above another from the hem to the paniers. Two velvet ribbon bows of French blue were placed on either side of the looped up satin overskirt, where it met the filmy underskirt of lace.

The bodice, arranged in surplice fashion, was of the shadow lace over flesh color chiffon. In the back the white satin of the foundation came up over this lace to the top of the right shoulder. Here a quaint wired bow of the blue velvet ribbon held the lace and brocade together, drawing the lace up from the arm, which was exposed, the other arm being half veiled with the lace.

straps that crossed it about an inch apart. These were fastened down with small silk buttons. The jacket was belted across the back, made cutaway, and had a sash at the left side which hung below the jacket so that it covered the corse band.

Styles That Are Firmly Established

A very long and interesting and instructive story could be written about our new Fall and Winter Styles of 1912 and 13. But we are content to merely hint at a few of the pleasing features and invite you to come and see them forthwith.

ALREADY THE FIRST BREATH OF AUTUMN IS FELT HERE

It is borne in by the host of new arrivals daily. The necessary requirements for styles that will satisfy the individual becomingness are met with surprisingly large lines to select from.

Favored Models in Fall Suits

The earnestness of our purpose to be first in the field with new and authoritative styles in apparel for women is clearly reflected by our advance showing of suits from makers whose productions rank high. The commonplace never gains entrance here. Interest will grow apace at the wide variety. Desire to possess should stimulate early action by women who are ambitious to be recognized as leaders in the matter of dress. Some of the new features of our Fall Suits are the longer coats. Most of them are cut on straight lines, some slightly aslant, others decidedly cutaway. The skirts have many charming effects in plaits and slashings. The materials are Serges, Cheviots, Heavy Diagonals, Mannish Suitings, Corduroys, Two Tone Mixtures, etc., in the new browns, navy, brown and black, grey and black. We show a big assortment of fancy mixtures which are especially good this season. The styles are unusually pleasing and nobby, having a tendency to be adopted to everybody's figure.

Coats Were Never So Attractive Before.

To stimulate early selections this section is offering some really extraordinary values in new fall Coats. We've given a great amount of time and thought to the selection here for the smartly dressed women. All the new materials, such as Chinchillas, Rough Diagonals and Mixtures. Also a splendid display of the New English Topper or intended for immediate wear, are decidedly nobby, 42 to 49 inches long, shown in heavy double faced plaid back cloth, wide wale materials, and fancy mixtures.

The New Furs

Styles in furs and fur garments for the season of 1912 and 1913 are absolutely fixed. The variations from former years are notable. Do you want to see the authoritative examples? We're ready. It scarcely pays to wait until the last moment in selecting furs. Buy as carefully as you would a diamond; assure yourself of quality and workmanship; examine, satisfy yourself.

It's because we're so sure of this splendid stock of new Furs that the invitation is given for you to come now and inspect it at your leisure.

from authoritative sources are also ready. Ready in wider assortments than you would have suspected or than we would have thought possible months ago.

A Store That Is Always New

In styles in apparel for women, this store takes its cue from the great center of fashion. We do not wait until the crisp newness has worn off, and oftentimes we are interestingly ahead of time, because we feel that we owe it to you to be ahead and to keep ahead.

FASHIONABLE FURS to be Seen on the Boulevards

Copyright 1912 by I. J. Robinson.

By Rene Mansfield.

N A sunny, frosty winter day, among the throngs of shoppers and the modish matrons on the boulevards it will be very difficult this season to find a single woman who has not a bit of fur added to her costume for ornamentation or warmth. It may be but a twist of soft, becoming fur about her hat, or a muff, or a smart little neck-piece, but you may be sure she will wear it, whether she be a tiny tot of five or a dowager of fifty.

Furs have been steadily changing taste for some time, and now, with our well-heated houses and the resulting tendency of women to dress lightly throughout the winter, they are regarded as a necessity and no longer a luxury. This great vogue for furs has brought out most desirable styles and values in the medium-priced pieces, so that the problem of furs is no longer the appalling matter of a few years ago.

In the parade of fashions along the boulevards this winter one will notice that fox skins seem to preponderate in their various treatments—gray, red pointed and cross fox. Mink, beaver, squirrel, lynx and caracul will be seen also, developed in many novel ways. Ermine, white coney and moleskin among the more expensive furs will be greatly favored.

The variety in the style of the neck pieces is unlimited, so that a woman may find her special requirements satisfied not only as to color and texture but as to lines and perfect suitability to her figure. For the woman with the long, perhaps scrawny neck there are the new cape effects which have most becoming standing collars, on the general lines of the storm collar. This style is usually made up in the close furs such as seal, Persian lamb or moleskin. The cape is small and sometimes has the points finished with tassels or fringe. Very chic was a piece of this description made from Persian lamb which had been laid in flat pleats about the neck. A twist of satin ribbon finished with a buckle covered the joining of the cape and collar.

Soft satin bows, crocheted buttons and passe menterie are being used extensively as a trimming on many sets; while the more expensive models show attractive borders, and trimmings accomplished by reversing furs to give striped or blocked effects. The note struck by the clever black and white or "magpie" combinations in the past season's modes has been sustained by the furriers in attractive conceits in the black furs interlaid with white fur.

There is little choice, in point of modishness, between the small neck-piece and the large picturesque stole effects,—both will be extremely popular. The "Colonial scarf" which is most becoming to almost any figure reaches just to the knees and may be trimmed with narrow bands of contrasting furs or have bands of the same fur applied in reverse fashion to give the same effect. Animal effects continue to be well liked. One of the prettiest of these styles which a striking brunette expects to wear this winter with a white broadcloth suit has the rounded cape effect in the back, while the long end of the stole in front is finished with tails and paws, the short end with two big paws, and the whole closes at the side with a great fur head.

Muffs have decreased not an iota in size nor luxuriance. The barrel, the half-barrel, square and pillow shapes, with their lining brought out beyond the edges and puffed or shirred, and their long cord handles, continue to be in great demand. A new idea which will appeal to any woman who complains of the inconvenience of carrying a muff and one of the large purses now so fashionable, is the pillow muff in which the shopping bag is arranged in the front, beneath a fancy overlapping pocket which snaps down onto the muff well down toward the lower part of the top.

The season's fur coats show many ingenious adaptations of the present style tendencies. The full length coats for street wear in seal, caracul, Persian lamb, moleskin and o'possum, and the fur-lined cloth coats all show the big collars and revers, wide cuffs, side closing, and even the slightly full back gathered into a half belt.

While the three-quarter length coats, many in novel styles of cutaway design, are offered in the more expensive garments, the 52 to 54-inch styles will find the widest favor. One of these long coats, in seal, united all the latest features of the season's dictates. It was closed at one side with three fancy buttons, set so close together as almost to overlap (most of the buttons are put on in this way). The collar, which was large and rounded at the back, and the long revers, were of the seal; the full length sleeves were finished by large cuffs and buttons; the back showed a belt that held the slight fullness above and below it in place.

Most attractive also was a coat of o'possum, in shaded style, that was double-breasted, fastening with two buttons on the left side, and had wide turn-back cuffs. Raccoon and seal were used for the collars and cuffs of two smart pony coats, the latter forming not only the collars and cuffs, but being applied in a wide band about the bottom.

Cloth coats, fur-lined and having collar and cuffs of another fur, are well liked, since they can be worn upon occasions when the all-fur coat is not desirable. An exclusive furrier who makes something of a specialty of this style of garment considered one of his best models a broadcloth, in a sort of elephant grey, which was lined with squirrel and had generous collar and cuffs of Persian lamb. The sleeves on this coat were of the set-in variety, but another coat he was showing had the sleeves designed in one with the body, so that there was a heavy seam from the shoulder to the cuff. This garment was drawn into a belt at the waist line in the back, with the slight fullness in the back that is a leading feature of full and snug coats.

Linings are an important detail of any garment for the fastidious woman. This season she will have no fault to find with the tasteful selections which have been made for the fur coats and scarfs. Changeable silk serges are durable and good-looking, while the striped silk give variety, and the rich brocades are always elegant and satisfactory.

A bit about Coiffures

By Jane Brayton.

ears and into a knot or twist at the nape of the neck. I think this style should be very becoming to you, although since you have a high forehead I'd suggest that you part your hair on the side and bring it well down across your forehead.

The back hair is being arranged in big coils that usually require a small foundation to build on. One sees many Psyche knots, and a new kind of French twist that is most attractive, being soft and loose—not at all like the tight, stiff twists we used to see.

The one-sided effects that have had such a tremendous vogue in costumes have surely gone to our heads, literally and figuratively. Often all the hair ornaments are worn on one side, and sometimes the hair is dressed so as to carry out the same effect. You never see a French woman these days without an ornament of some kind in her hair. It may be a tortoise comb, or a jeweled pin, or an elaborate bandeau of brilliants.

A new notion that has found favor with not a few modish women is the wearing of a wide comb, usually with a roll-band top, as a sort of bandeau across the front of the head. This is put in with the teeth pointing forward, and really has a very youthful charm. You would love the ribbon ornaments I noticed in a box at the theatre the other evening, my dear. One was a wreath of tiny pink flowers, made of ribbon, with here and there a bit of soft green, and a bunch of the flowers with pert ends of the ribbon forming a choux which the pretty girl who wore it had adjusted coquettishly just back of her left ear. The other was a wired true-lover's knot of white satin—quite like the wired bows we used to wear a few years ago—which was worn low in the back beside the coil of hair that a little brunette wore low in her neck. Quite a novelty are the hair pins to which are attached feathery airrettes of spun glass, that come in almost all colors. The airrette springs from a rhinestone-studded ornament of some sort—a crown, perhaps, or a bowknot, a butterfly, a bird, or flower. I have seen these attractive little ornaments selected with such tasteful regard for color harmonies or contrasts that they gave character to the whole costume. I hope this little gossip will give you a few new ideas, Louise, which I shall hope to see carried out in your own charming way when I return.

Faithfully,

Marie.

MODISH MILLINERY FOR AUTUMN WEAR

Copyright 1912 by I. J. Robinson.

WITH the coming of the chilly days millinery, that sensitive barometer of fashion, is beginning to take on warmer hues and sturdier outlines. The defunct remnants of the summer's grandeur, with their faded flowers, limp brims, dragged ribbons or ragged wings have been relegated to the attic, and the early fall hat is with us.

In general form it bears a close resemblance to its summer cousin, being only one season removed. It is neither very large nor very small, and while the rolling brim effects, with medium crowns, predominate, still the variety of smart shapes is so great that one will have no difficulty in being suited. There are the straight-brim sailors, so trim and jaunty for street wear, trimmed with ribbon or wings; there are several new adaptations of the tricorn style; there are soft, big-crowned felts, and demure, drooping velours, as well as large turbans having somewhat modified Tam O'Shanter crowns and charming models for dressier wear built on excellent lines with slightly rolling brims, or brims upturned sharply to the front or side.

For early fall wear the silk hat comes into its annual prominence, this year with added impetus because of the great vogue for silk apparel which has by no means run its course. Toffeta will be used, but moiré is the fabric par excellence for these models. Especially smart are the white moiré effects when trimmed with dashing bows or simulated wings of black velvet. That shirtings and puffs have not lost caste is proved by the continued use of them on many of these new hats. A narrow shirred puff of black velvet ribbon bound the brim of a smart white moiré seen in one of the shops the other day, and outlined the simulated wings of the moiré, that were placed at the left side and pointed backward.

A sailor shape in dark blue moiré was attractively trimmed with a pleated brim binding of bluish green ribbon, of the popular plect-edge variety. The same pleating encircled the crown and was formed into two quill like ornaments that were laid flatly across the side front.

Ribbons and wings will play an important part in the trimming of the fall hats. Many novelties in ribbon have appeared this season which are well adapted to clever use on the tailored or even semi-dressy hats. Moiré ribbons have first place, those having cable or cord edges being preferred. White, with a black edge, is much used, while the narrow, cord edged taffetas are also in good style.

Wings and fancy feather ornaments are very prominent. Vulture quills thrust through the crown of a white felt hat formed its only trimming, and the effect was striking and chic. Pheasant tails are particularly smart on the strictly tailored hat, but a woman should study well her height, figure and face before she selects such a hat, because no style of trimming lends itself so readily to caricature.

Extremely good-looking was a model of this character in the latest sailor style—having a rounded, medium crown and slightly rolled edges—which was made from a deep, reddish purple moiré, and had two purple pheasant tails spring from a tiny tailored bow directly in the front, at the base of the crown.

Aigrettes, plumes and other wing trimmings show a decided tendency to backward angles. Many of the dressier models have the plumes arranged so that they curl over the brims; indeed one handsome importation with a sharply upturned brim had two long plumes fastened to the under part of the brim at the side, and cunningly manipulated so that they curved up in most graceful fashion over the brim, sweeping backward.

This revival of under-brim trimming which has been gaining in popularity since mid-summer will be a marked feature of the fall and winter millinery. Not only will aigrettes and plumes be attached to the under side of sharply turned brims, but bunches of flowers will also be used and bows of ribbon or velvet. Nothing could be more becoming than a velvet hat, illustrating this fancy, in coquettish, or poppy shades. The crown was in the soft Rembrandt style, and the brim, which was faced with a deep blue chiffon was turned up well toward the back. The only trimming was a close wreath effect of velvet poppies which was carried around the crown and over the brim at the back, to end in a tight bunch on the brim just above the hair.

Another striking revival, in the way of shapes, is the flat shovel shape hat, with no crown. The brim of this is short in the front but ascends toward the back, where it extends considerably over the hair. The back is often filled in with lopped ribbon or flowers and the top trimming usually consists of folds of silk or velvet, or sweeping Birds of Paradise.

After the riotous colors of the spring and summer months the deep, subdued colorings that are favored for fall and winter wear in millinery come somewhat as a relief. Soft shades of blue, deep reddish plum, chocolate brown, nickel grey, myrtle green, Linden green, a shade called Jacque rose, wistaria shades and bronze colorings—these are well represented in the millinery spectrum for frosty days.

Before you venture into the emporiums of bewitching, bewildering millinery, you will do well to study carefully your face and general style and their requirements. And, whereas, it is permissible, nay, desirable to match your suit or your gown, or your coat, be particular not to match your face. You have seen them, I'm sure—women whose hats matched their faces.

If your face inclines to the broad, heavy type, fight shy of the broad, squatty hat of no particular outline.

If your face is narrow and thin, be ware of the hat that turns up or down at the sides, and eschew wings, especially if your nose is inclined to be sharp.

If your chin is a good, strong chin, but with a slight tendency to protrude a little beyond the line of classic beauty, do not exaggerate it by a head covering that hugs your brow and sweeps out boldly behind.

Notice the curve of your lips and the line of your eyebrows. If your mouth droops, do not accentuate it by drooping, pensive brims. If your nose is what small brother calls a "pug," pass by the hat that turns square up in front.

Only if you are beautiful—perfectly, classically beautiful—may you sally forth, shut your eyes, put anything upon your head and rejoice.

SCORES OF AUTHORITATIVE STYLES IN New Fall HATS Are Here Both For Street and Dress Occasion.

Variety will be the keynote of the millinery styles for Fall. This pertains not only to the materials, but to the shapes and to the trimming features as well.

The vogue for black and white is to continue undiminished for Fall. This combination is dominant, and until a leader in colors is determined it will assume first position. Some especially handsome shapes are shown of plush and satin—a white crown with a black brim, or vice versa. Long napped plush shapes with underbrims or velvet or felt are much in evidence.

Never have we been so well prepared to satisfy every demand for new style and modish hats as we are at this season.

Health Is the Foundation of All Good Looks

THE WISE WOMAN REALIZES THIS AND TAKES PRECAUTIONS TO PRESERVE HER HEALTH THROUGH CHIROPRACTIC.

You know that there is not one iota of a doubt but that Chiropactic will do all that is claimed for it. Chiropactic is one of the modern sciences just as Aviation and Submarine Travel and must be accepted in the same broad way as these other two sciences have and are being accepted daily. Chiropactic is the modern way to health. You cannot afford to ignore it. If you are unwell see the Chiropactor at once. He will remove the cause of your disease which is due to impingement of the nerves at the point where they leave the spinal column.

COUGHS, COLDS, BRONCHITIS.

Illustration No. 6. A case of a lady with a bad cough and bronchitis caused by a subluxation of the 6th cervical vertebra pressing the nerves ramifying the bronchial tubes and causing severe coughing spells. This was readily overcome by adjusting the vertebra to normal position. Similar cases are of frequent occurrence and I have caused many people to get well who were affected by the same trouble.

PARALYSIS AND WEAK HEART.

Illustration No. 7 shows the 7th vertebra of the neck out of place. A case in point is that of a man who had paralysis on one side, and the heart was weak, caused by the dislocated vertebra pressing on the nerves leading to the brain and heart and shutting off the nervous energy. By adjusting the vertebra the normal condition was restored and the man was made well. I have a great many of these cases, and 98 per cent were made well.

CONSUMPTION AND BRONCHIAL TROUBLE.

Illustration No. 9. Consumption in a young man. The second and third dorsal vertebrae were found in a lateral subluxated condition, throwing a pressure on the nerves that ramify the lungs, causing decomposition of the lungs which throws the patient into consumption. By replacing the vertebrae and removing the pressure from these nerves it gives nature a chance to restore perfect health. I have had a large percent of these cases, and all were either made well or much benefited. Consumption is not contagious, as very many people associate with these cases daily, and yet are no more liable to contract this disease than men engaged in other callings.

Bronchitis is started with a cold or catarrhal condition of the head, the discharge therefrom running down the bronchial tubes which irritates the nerves and causing contraction of the muscles which produces a subluxation of the first and second dorsal vertebra. The result is Bronchitis and Consumption. By replacing these dorsal vertebrae we restore the natural condition and the disease disappears immediately.

DIM SIGHT EYE DISEASES.

Illustration No. 10. Lady blind most of time for 5 years; tumor on one side of eye-balls. The vertebra of the first and second cervical were shutting off the nerves leading to eyes. She suffered intensely. These vertebrae were adjusted to normal position and she regained her sight and became well. Cases of eye diseases of various kinds are brought to us. All have been made well when adjustments were taken. We find that pressure on the nerves leading to different parts of the eye causes the different diseases; so the subluxation is not always at the same place in the spine.

DYSPEPSIA AND INDIGESTION.

Illustration No. 11. A nationally known man suffered with dyspepsia and indigestion for many years. Adjusted the vertebra of the spine at 5th, 6th and 7th dorsal vertebrae restoring the nervous energy to the stomach, and he can now eat any kind of food without trouble. Hundreds of our cases are of this nature. All get entirely well and at a smaller cost than you would

Illustration No. 12. Prominent business man found he had a weak heart and the beats were not regular. He sold out his business expecting to retire. He finally called on us and we found 2nd and 4th dorsal vertebrae subluxated by replacing these vertebrae we removed the pressure from heart nerves which restored it to normal, and he is now well. This man went back into active business. We have a great many cases of weak heart, and all get well by taking Illustration No. 13. A successful plumber had enlargement of the liver from a contracted fever and malaria. Severe cramps were always felt. When examined by the Chiropactor the cause of the disease was immediately located. This case was entirely overcome by adjusting spine at 7th, 8th and 9th dorsal vertebrae, thus loosening the nerves to liver and re-establishing the mental impulses, which is life. In biliousness the liver is often overworked by eating more food than needed, and then when it can not perform its function any more, it is forced into activity by laxatives, until the trouble ends in chronic constipation. These people can all become well by Chiropactic Adjustment, freeing nerves to liver and bowels. We have more of these cases than any other kind. It takes considerable time when case is chronic, but can always be successfully handled. If laxatives are continued or stimulants it will end in stroke of paralysis or other serious troubles.

SMART TOGGERY for the LITTLE TOTS

Copyright 1912 by I. J. Robinson.

"I really get most of my ideas of style from the little coats and dresses I buy for the kiddies," said a busy mother the other day. "You can depend upon them to represent all the newest ideas in grown-up styles, simplified somewhat, to be sure, but still indicative of the trend of fashion."

Especially true is this of the present season's offering in juvenile apparel. Dazzling replicas of the mode's fall whims are the little coats, dresses and hats offered for selection.

Wee coats show suitable adaptations of the Robespierre collar, which is a long name to call a collar no bigger than a cuff; the fashionable single revers is a feature of many models; set-in sleeves predominate; and belts, always well liked for children's garments, are especially prominent this season. Some of these, to be quite à la mode,

Fur trimming is seen on many of the velvet and corduroy coats. White satin collars and cuffs, inlaid with lace insertion are also pretty on these dressy coats. For the coats designed for play time wear, in fancy worsteds, serges, chinchillas and chevrons, buttons form the main trimmings. Those in pretty colorings to match, or blend with the coat are most attractive. Crystal and bone buttons continue in good style.

There is a pleasing variety of styles in the dress and every-day frocks for the little girl, ranging from the sailor and Russian blouse effects to the quaint little Empire designs. A bewitching demure frock made from the softest silk with a border of tiny rosebuds and forget-me-nots had this Empire waistline. A crossed band drawn into the soft belt, from which hung a sash at the left of the front. The skirt was laid in small pleats about the waist and stitched flat.

Much simpler, but altogether charming, are the little dresses on which smocking forms the main trimming. Challs was used for one of these, which was cut all in one piece, very much as is the peasant's smock. A smart touch was given to the frock by the over-lay side collars of white linen, having sharp points, which covered part of the smocking that formed the waist and neck. The sleeves were finished with narrow cuffs of the linen, and the low belt parted in front to reveal several rows of smocking.

Still another style most welcome on very small maids is the long-waisted French dress with a short upper body or yoke shaped like a bolero. To this the waist is gathered. A wide sash, or ribbon-run beading covers the joining of waist and flaring skirt, which may be plain or have a tiny frill about the bottom.

Hats and bonnets for the little tots are quite adorable. For rough and ready wear are the soft felts and beavers and simple plushes, in jaunty shapes. Sometimes a bit of ribbon trims them; or a pert feather adds a piquant dash to the little models. When daughter goes a-visiting her small face is framed in a cunning bonnet, of silk or velvet, faced, perhaps, with shirred silk, or chiffon or lace. If her coat is trimmed with fur her tiny bonnet may also have a touch of fur upon it. Or perhaps a small cluster of flowers, or a demure little bunch of tips trims the dainty little affair, making her look like a quaint old picture.

Copyright 1912 by I. J. Robinson.

THE well-dressed woman is becoming more and more fastidious about the smallest details of her costumes. They may be simple and few, but she insists that they be perfect in themselves, with all the accessories chosen with care and tastefulness.

She will be delighted with a recent importation that is a decided novelty and that will enable her to preserve the color note of her gown or suit. This is a beautiful little watch with an enamel back, or rather with no less than six enamel backs which are interchangeable, each one being of a different color. The watch, with its six backs, is most attractively boxed, and may be worn with a pin or on a chain.

There is scarcely a glint of gold in the show cases of the jewelry shops this season. Platinum is the favored metal for mountings of all kinds, and in the dead finish it lends a certain delicacy as well as an artistic value to the designs.

Another noticeable feature of jeweled conceits is the prevalence of what is called the box setting,—that is, the stones are set deep in the metal so that the surface is practically flat. Rings, bracelets and lockets show this setting almost exclusively.

Square and triangular designs are being especially favored in rings just now. An emerald, topaz, sapphire, amethyst, or opal may be surrounded with one or two rows of small diamonds, forming a square, or a triangle, with the point extending toward the knuckle. This style of ring is particularly becoming to a long, slim hand, but will not be so well liked on a short-fingered, chubby hand as the narrow circulet styles. This adapting of the styles of the ring to the hand is a matter that is too often neglected. One should study very carefully the proportions of the palm and fingers when selecting either a ring or a bracelet, to get the best results. Massive bracelets are not for the plump wrist, nor yet for the scrawny one.

Study also the complexion of your hands and arms when purchasing jewelry. Blue stones, such as the sapphire or the lapis lazuli, tend to make the skin appear white; green stones have a similar effect, particularly emeralds. Diamonds unless combined with other stones will emphasize the lost freshness of an old hand.

More important than the choice of rings is the selection of earrings. The long drop earrings are being much worn, but rarely with effective results. They are bewitching when they sway daintily beside a very young, round face, but the wise woman with a wrinkle or two will do well to wear them only in the evening when the lamp light gives back to her the "U" that time has taken.

The vogue for seed pearl is reflected in the attractive hat pins that are being shown, the bow knot brooches, and the pretty mounts on two-prong hair-pins. Hat pins, by the way, have assumed normal dimensions once more, and many artistic designs are offered, particularly in gold and silver knob effects.

Two new ideas have been developed in pins. One is called the shoulder pin—a plain or engraved pin about four inches long, which is sometimes made about a half inch shorter and in the long narrow buckle effect set with semi-precious stones; the other is the slipper pin. These, of course, come in pairs, and are in buckle design, but have pins attached, so that they may readily be changed from one pair of slippers to another, without the bother of sewing.

Smart and Sensible is the Season's Footwear

By Rene Mansfield.

tip, while those on the heavier boots are greatly simplified, depending on stitching rather than perforations to effect a neat finish.

Very few lace shoes are being shown, except those in the more mannish cuts, intended essentially for athletic wear or street use. The fourteen button length is preferred, although some of the sturdier models, in gun metal or tan calf show as many as sixteen.

Toes are comfortably round and full, while heels, though not as low as many of the summer styles would seem to have indicated, are reasonably low and broad, without detracting from the undoubted charm which the more extreme models possess.

The woman who likes to carry out the color scheme of her costumes to the last detail will be glad to know that overgarters, to match one's dress or suit will be much worn during the winter. Cloth top shoes are also considered very smart, in gray and tan and pearl, as well as in black.

A bit conspicuous, but most attractive on a slender foot, is the button boot with the top of cheec cloth, usually in black and white. The vamp of patent leather has a long wing tip, which is stitched and perforated.

Only eight good-size, flat buttons were used on a light weight patent shoe with a cloth top, which had a comparatively narrow toe, without a cap, and was most flexible and well cut. Grey suede and white buckskin are also considerably used for the tops of dressy little boots for afternoon wear.

The Directoire modes, which will hold fashion's stage this season, will exert an influence, charming and distinctive, over shoe styles for evening wear. From beneath clinging, trailing satin draperies, satin clad feet will peep, in pure French style with sparkling buckles, or filmy rosettes, or in Colonial demureness.

The bewitching French heel, beloved by women and execrated by wise, wise men, is displacing once again the less becoming, if more sensible straight heel, for ultra-dress occasions. Metallic effects have also to some extent given place to daintier fabrics and ornaments.

Fluffy chicken rosettes, some of them dotted with crystals or tiny pearls, buckles of Rhinestones and of the popular seed pearls, and Colonial buckles in various new finishes—these are the principal slipper adornments that will be seen during the social season.

TASTEFULNESS and moderation distinguish the season's offering of footwear. We may have to pass laws about the length of batplis, but at least we do not need to thrust into prison, as in the days of King Charles, enthusiastic followers of fashion, the toes of whose shoes were so long, and sharp, and pointed, as to be a menace to the public welfare.

Our heels have come down—our toes have spread out and flattened down to comfortable and rational proportions and our predilection for freakish lasts has quite vanished. A glance in the window of any fashionable boot shop discloses the attractive and practicable features of the new fall styles. One notices, first of all, the pleasing lack of ornamentation on the dress shoes as well as the street shoes. The majority of the dressier styles have no

"Lingerie Oft Proclaims the Woman"

Copyright 1912 by I. J. Robinson.

An old Frenchman once said that if you would know a woman you should look at her, not listen to her. But it is not enough to study her expressions and her costumes; if you would really know her a glimpse into her chiffonier will tell you more than all else. If fresh, sweet dainty muslins, threaded with delicate ribbons, and faintly fragrant with sachet meet your prying eyes you may be sure their owner is a woman essentially refined and fastidious.

It is not a difficult matter these days for any woman to have undergarments that are at once pretty and neat and inexpensive. The shops are showing charming models that range in price from the most moderate to the most extravagant.

These are the popular combination garments—those which unite corset cover and drawers seem to be greatly preferred—which can be bought for one dollar. These are reasonably fine as to material, and trimmed with pretty embroidery and lace.

What is called the Empire combination is one of the recent novelties which is gaining favor because of its neat fit over the low-busted corsets now so much worn. It is in the princess drawer style and has a deep Empire yoke, often elaborately lace trimmed.

Another new style of combination garment is the chemise which also serves as drawers. It is cut very scant, and just to the knees. Three button-holes on the edge in the center of the back piece button up onto the three tiny buttons at the edge of the front breadth, forming thus the drawers.

Cluny lace is probably the most popular of laces for lingerie trimming, although filet and the French and German Valenciennes are also used a great deal. Madeira embroideries are often combined with the val laces, as are medallions of embroidery and lace. All trimming is kept very flat however, so as to preserve the slim lines so necessary to the present modes.

Dream gowns, or more prosaically, night robes, show few new features. The slip-over styles remain on the crest of feminine favor, because of their simplicity and comfort. Cotton crepe, so well liked for summer lingerie, because of the ease with which it is laundered, bids fair to be used considerably this winter, especially for the gowns. It is not only labor-saving, but most attractive, particularly in the dainty Dresden or ring designs.

Somewhat more expensive, but very soft and lovely are the crepe de chine garments that are gaining the increasing consideration of the modish woman. For five and six dollars one can obtain a beautiful gown in delicate pink or blue crepe de chine, charmingly trimmed with Cluny lace, and most desirable combinations as low as four.

Crepe de chine is also being used to some extent in the new petticoats. These have considerable more fullness at the bottom, although the tops remain gored snugly, and the finishing ruffles are really scanty, being sometimes pleated fine and pressed flat. Messaline and peau de cygne are well liked because of their supple and lustrous qualities.

SOMETHING NEW IN NEGLIGES.

Whether the Cleopatra rest robe will ever displace the comfortable, often picturesque, and more often slovenly, kimono is uncertain, but there is no doubt of its tremendous vogue in Paris, and little that it will gain immediate favor here.

It suggests rather the one-piece frock than the negligee, made as it is somewhat in the form of the slip-over night-gowns with the kimono sleeves. An elaborate gown of this description, which could be produced in the simplest fabrics to good effect, had a foundation of orange colored silk veiled with watermelon pink voile. It was cut from one length of material so that the only seams were those running from under the arms to the feet. The strip of fabric at the center was shaped to fit about the base of the throat, and was slit across and over the shoulders where the garment was fastened with ball buttons of bronze beads. An attractive band of bronze-colored stenciling formed the border about the bottom of the skirt, the neck and the sleeves. Brown silk piped the sleeves and the edge of the neck, and long cords of bronze and gold beads hung from just under the arms on either side. The woman who is clever with her needle will at once recognize the possibilities suggested by this interesting negligee.

Also capable of home reproduction are the pretty French voile dressing sacsques, in all the delicate shades which are hand-embroidered in white linen floss. The sleeves are cut in one with the garment and have the embroidery carried about their edge. It also follows the scalloped edge of the sacsque and forms the finish for the neck. Either a small round collar or a simple collarless neck are most often seen. The attractive little jacket reaches only a few inches below the waist line and has the fronts cut in slightly cut-away effect.

An odd little boudoir cap seen in an exclusive shop the other day was formed of narrow frills of sheer lace placed one above another in cone shape. From the tip of the crown to the outer frill, on one side, was a row of stiff little pale blue bows, overlapping each other, the last one having ends which fell over the shoulder. Can you imagine anything more bewitching?

CORSETS SHOW FEW CHANGES.

Flexibility is the sine qua non of the correct corset. Bone after bone has been whipped out with this result in view, until some of the most successful models boast but two, beside the front and back steels. To give the figure ample support and yet retain the soft, pliant lines of nature without the least suggestion of rigidity, is the function of the present corsets, and, indeed, they are well-nigh ideal in this respect.

They continue very long from the waist down, but the bust is considerably lower on the latest models. The topless styles are very well liked by extremely slender women, who often supplement them with a brassiere.

Brassieres have become as indispensable to the slim woman as to the stout woman. In the first case they add a pleasing contour to the figure, giving it that grace of line that nothing else seems to supply. In the latter case they gently control the flesh and give shapeliness to the most ample figures.

Delicate color ideas are being widely introduced into corset fabrics. Most attractive are those with tiny pink, blue, or other pale colored flowers scattered over them. Narrow stripes in colors are also used, and a suggestion of color in the trimmings is often cleverly introduced.

New Fall Hats Are Ready For Your Selection at The Hat Shop

Velours claim attention for street wear.

For early season hats, taffeta, charmeuse, moire, satin, fancy bengaline and metal cloth will be utilized chiefly in combination with velvets.

The influence of the Directoire period is clearly noticeable in the variety of quaint little flat brimmed shapes with medium, tall and wide crowns.

Another prominent shape is the Postilion, which is distinguished by a flat-topped crown and narrow curved-up brim, somewhat on the order of the derby which enjoyed such a wide vogue last season.

Mushrooms will be considerably in evidence. The newest type of mushroom has a huge, flat tam crown. This was introduced recently in Paris and appeared here almost at the same time.

The Watteau shape is perhaps one of the most striking introduced. This is distinguished by a flat, almost crownless appearance with a scooped-up effect in the back, under which the trimming is usually massed.

A wide variety in jaunty rolled-brim hats is shown. Both large and small sailor shapes will claim attention.

In millinery trimmings, simplicity is the dominant characteristic. Not only is the trimming itself of moderate proportions, but it is simply adjusted, at some odd but striking angle.

Quantities of ostrich fantasies in various colors and color combinations will be employed. Smart wings, coq, white vulture, magpie and gourd will be represented, in the order mentioned.

Paradise will be the leading decoration on ultra-exclusive models. The increase in price prohibits its use on any other grade.

Maline is to be a factor of prime importance; in spite of the long run which it has already enjoyed. Some of the most striking models will be developed in plush, velvet and maline, combined with a smart, flat bow of ribbon.

Interest in the use of ribbon decorations is steadily growing. The picot-edge varieties, particularly in faille, will be prominently featured, together with moires.

Tall, upright effects in front posing arrangement will hold their own well into the season. No other form of arrangement is so well adapted to the decoration of the postilion and small directoire shapes.

A noteworthy feature in the application of trimmings is the harmony that is sought for between the shape and the trimming. Thus, a small, stiff tailored effect will have a decoration in like fashion, while a sweeping picturesque style will be given a graceful trimming with a sweeping effect.

Ladies' Tailoring That is in a Class by Itself

It took us some time to get our tailoring store up to the present standard, but our past hopes have been realized and today we have a tailoring store without a peer in this portion of the country.

Many of Janesville's most particular women have ordered their autumn and winter clothing—the best work takes time. It's not too early to think of the future. But a word to those who have never tried this establishment: Let us make you a suit, if you are not satisfied with the workmanship or material you do not have to pay for it. Get acquainted with our tailoring store and it will be an agreeable acquaintance not soon forgotten.

The garments put out by this establishment are all man-tailored on the premises under the personal supervision of the proprietor. Each garment is distinctively individual. Suggestions from patrons are always carried out if they are reasonably consistent. The personal wishes of the patron are not overlooked in the making of the clothing—your garment made here will, therefore, express more or less of your own individuality and taste.

Prices range from $40.00 to $150.00. The highest grade of work is produced at a minimum of cost. You enjoy the economy.

When the Dreams Of a Home Come True

By Margaret Morton

bookcase that contains brightly bound volumes, to furnish the glow of color that gives life and charm to a room, such a room can not fail to be a success.

The choice of furniture depends largely upon the amount one is able to expend for it. It is much better to get a few good pieces, and bring in the dining room chairs, in the event of guests, than to crowd your room with inferior furniture. A few pieces of mahogany, in good, simple design, or comfortable chairs and a table in the roomed oak or other dark finishes may be delightfully supplemented by chairs or a stool of attractive wicker, whose gay cushions may provide just the necessary touch of color.

A beautiful room planned by a recent bride, that preserved the monotone idea in furnishing and yet seemed alight with subtle color had walls of grey burlap, and the pine wood also stained a dull grey. The rug was a plain Wilton velvet, having a darker toned border, in old blue, and the hangings of the windows and doorways were of raw silk, hung straight and square, of the dark blue. Ecru scrim with an edging of Arabian braid was used for the curtains. Upon entering the room the interest was at once carried to the hospitable fireplace of red brick, that was set with grey mortar; then it was claimed by the books in their red and brown bindings near by,—from there to the lamp with shade of wonderful sunset effects formed in the glass against which pine trees in hand-wrought copper raised their spires.

The varying shades of brown with now and then a touch of orange, to give the effect forms the basis of another color scheme that is well adapted to the Mission style of furniture. Oriental rugs, if possible, with plenty of orange or red in them, and curtains with a decided yellow glow complete the scheme, which may be further emphasized by yellow shades and cushions and a few etchings and sepiá tints on the wall.

THE NEEDS OF THE DINING ROOM

The dining room does not present the problem of the living room, because its chief beauty lies in formality of treatment, and in the restraint of its decorative features. Mahogany and oak are the woods most favored for dining room sets. Those in mahogany, in Colonial design, are charming,—the "thousand leg" table, the attractive chairs and the sturdy serving table. The Jacobean design is a good selection, in the brown oak; the chairs have leather covered slips and the serving table with a long drawer and pendant handles may also be utilized as a buffet.

Dining room walls are most successful when in panel effect or wainscoted. The plate rail has gone the way of the castor, so that one no longer sees distracting rows of dishes circling the walls. The Colonial, Georgian and Adam style of furniture demand the white wood trim, with which the prim, old-fashioned papers are charming.

A woman who had fallen heir to a beautiful old mahogany sideboard, some curious knife boxes and a serving table, developed a lovely old room by keeping it in harmony with these few things. The table and chairs were reproductions in mahogany of old pieces. The wood trim was in grey, with the walls tinted a warm yellow. The blue of the rug was repeated in the old blue china in the English plate rack, and the odd blue china lamps on the shelf of the fireplace which was of rough red brick. Curtains of bright chintz were hung at the windows, in which blue and yellow predominated.

THE FAVORED BEDROOM FURNISHINGS

There are several varieties of woods that are suitable for the bedroom sets. Black walnut, mahogany, in reproductions of the Sheraton and Chippendale designs, and Circassian walnut are all well thought of. The latter wood has so striped a grain that very simple hangings and wall papers are best with it, but when properly handled nothing is more beautiful. White furniture with cane panel insets is delightful, as it comes in all manner of unique pieces. The present revival of hand-painted furniture is particularly noticeable in bedroom sets. Small painted medallions or panels decorate many of the white enamel sets. A dainty white-wood set finished in ivory had panels of grey cane inset, and odd handles of brushed brass.

If the bride is limited as to her expenditure for the bedroom furniture she can still have a thoroughly satisfactory room by buying inexpensive furniture and having it painted. What can be accomplished with little money and artistic tastes is well illustrated by the room that enchanted her friends when a young matron ushered them into it on the occasion of her first "at home."

The walls were a mist of softest grey roses with hearts of pinkish mauve, and the rug was a happy combination of grey and mauve. Side hangings of mauve silk over ivory net were indescribably pretty. The bed, dressing table and chiffonier were of grey enamel and the wood work had been painted grey. A wicker table stained a deep mauve lent just the right touch to the charming scheme, which gave at once a most pleasing sense of repose and harmony.

It doesn't matter if she has dreamed of terraced lawns and gold drawing rooms and a retinue of pompous, liveried servants, when she first crosses the threshold of her new home, be it a cottage or a couple of rooms, the happy bride steps within a charmed circle which seems all at once to contain the realization of her dearest dreams. If it has been all furnished ready to receive her, there will still be a hundred small changes to make, so that every nook and corner of it shall show the touch of a home-making woman.

But if the pleasure of selecting the new furnishings, from the davenport to the rolling pin, is to be her's, what towering piles of catalogues will she devour, how many trips to the furniture stores will she make, and how many anxious moments will she have, as she squats at each new acquisition from every possible angle and distance! The pitfalls of house furnishing are many, and fatal to that comfortable sense of satisfaction that comes with the consciousness of a tastefully appointed home. A hat of clashing colors and lines may be discarded after a couple of seasons, at the most; but a rug of discordant hues or a chair with overgrown arms and legs must abide with you forevermore.

ABOUT THE FIREPLACE. The bride's first attention will be given to the living room, the very heart of the house, where all that the new family stands for will be as clearly set forth as if it were written on the wall. She must determine at the outset, whether her wall decorations shall be of value in themselves or serve merely as a background for her pictures and furniture. As a bride is usually well endowed with pictures and bric-a-brac she would be wise to choose a paper of unpronounced design, bearing in mind the style of her furniture and the colorings she wishes for her rugs and draperies.

A room in which the walls, floor coverings and furniture are kept in quiet, unobtrusive tones, with bright cushions, well chosen portieres, or perhaps only a warm hued lamp, or a

Stands as a Leader Among the So-called Player Pianos

The first requisite in purchasing a player piano is to examine the financial status and the stability of the maker.

The permanency of a guarantee is of no value unless the financial and business standing of the maker is beyond question.

Experience in manufacture is the next consideration that the prospective purchaser must have in mind. A manufacturer who has been building player pianos for years knows what material is best and most efficient and reliable to put in the piano. He has also had time to build up an organization and establish a standard of workmanship that will insure proper application of design and material.

The Bjur Bros. Player Pianos are reliable, there is no question to be considered. If you have heard one, or what is better used one, you can appreciate what the WONDERFUL RICH SINGING QUALITY of tone means. Call and see them.

A Few Suggestions About Floor Coverings

By Margaret Morton

THE high standards of unpretentious sincerity that we are these days setting for ourselves in home decoration are particularly well illustrated by the rugs and carpets one sees in tasteful homes. The principle of selection seems to have been, "Rather a good rag rug than a cheap Oriental."

To be sure, the good Oriental will always remain the most desirable of floor-coverings, from point of both serviceability and beauty, but it is being used with greater discrimination and more careful study of its decorative values than ever before. Instead of a promiscuous selection of Orientals, whose sizes and colors are at variance, one sees rugs in perfect harmony with spaces and color schemes. In the long hall, perhaps, is a Bijar; in the hall that is large and square, a Gorevans of Persia, with its green and woody and rich mahogany tones; while in the living room one is likely to find an antique Iran, or one of the lovely Serebends or Majals.

The English plain rugs are much used and with beautiful effect. The Saxony, Whitall and Anglo-Persian are especially desirable.

There is a noticeable tendency toward plain, solid colorings in floor-coverings, which is well met by the pleasing designs of many of the Wilton rugs. The Wilton carpeting may be obtained as wide as three yards, which may be bought for ten dollars a yard, and makes a very beautiful rug, because for many rooms no seam is required.

The popularity of Colonial architecture and the present fondness for the antique has brought about the revival of the rag rug. Rag rugs or carpets may be had ready made in certain stock sizes or they may be made to order in almost any size from the buyer's own rugs or from rags furnished by the rugmaker. Thus it is possible to obtain many delightful color effects, often so hard to do in other styles of rugs.

These rugs can be made seamless in any size up to sixteen feet in width, and any length.

The fiber or grass rugs have a durability and an artistic quality far in excess of what might be assumed from their most moderate prices. One of the cheaper grass rugs bears a design stenciled on its upper surface after the weaving has been done, so that the reverse side is plain but equally useable. These come as low as $1.39 for a piece 3 feet by 6 feet, and $9.00 for one 9 feet by 12 feet.

Designs that suggest the Navajo colorings and patterns are used for another variety of fiber rugs that have the fiber braided to resemble hammock cord. These are somewhat more expensive than other types, a 9 by 12 size costing about twenty dollars. The regulation Navajo rugs, by the way, are taking on considerably more subtle hues, and their quieter colorings have added not a little to their beauty and practicability.

For $2.50, one can buy an interesting Madagascar straw-braided rug which is the Oriental counterpart of the old-fashioned rag rug. It is straw colored with narrow, wavy black lines near the border and a plain design in the center.

Seen On The Artware Tables

Copyright 1912 by I. J. Robinson.

LAMPS that shed the glow of sunset, or glimmer softly like pale stars, marbles, like cameos against their dark velvet shelves,—the sweeping lines of low-toned pottery,—the furling wreaths of fragrance above the incense burners,—these things make the artware shops a joy and a temptation.

There is such a happy union of beauty and utility in many of the articles that one can indulge one's taste without an undue sense of extravagance. The beautiful French vase lamps are of this description, with their delicate shades following the color and design of the lamp. Most decorative, also, was a Ruskin enameled vase in old pink which had a silk shade in a rich old rose hue.

Japanese pottery in dull green formed the bowl of another lamp which bore a lovely shade of green and brown silk. On a dull gift standard rested a soft, old gold shade having a fringe of silk the same color. For the sun parlor

Hard carved boudoir lamps, daintily enameled in white and light colorings add a charming touch to the bedrooms, while desk lamps may be found in infinite variety. Practical, yet pretty, was one of these in-vert bronze with a green crystal shade to match.

Exceptionally beautiful in design and texture are the bowls, dishes, candlesticks and vases in the new white Italian majolica, which is, after all, simply a revival of a wonderful old ware. The designers have drawn their inspiration from the pure antique, of Italian, Greek and Chinese ceramic art, with most satisfying results. An unusual table set in this ware consisted of a tall fluted standard upon which a bowl in old Italian design rested, and that was intended to hold flowers, and four candlesticks of similar pattern with simple shades in delicate tapestry effect.

The American potteries are putting forth some highly creditable work these days, notable among them being the Van Briggie pieces that are distinguished for their simplicity of design and range and quality of color. Deep purples and blues, cardinal reds, browns, an exquisite turquoise blue, and soft lavenders, delicate blues, and mist greys afford a wide selection as to color, which even in its most pronounced use presents a dull, velvety appearance.

The popular glass-lined trays are being shown in any number of new conceptions. Japanese prints, handsome old brocades, Chinese embroidery, chintz, flint net over some delicate color, and Japanese stencils have all been utilized to form the bottoms of these attractive and useful articles.

The Favored Wall Treatments

By Margaret Morton

Copyright 1912 by I. J. Robinson.

Although never has there been so great a variety in papers and in the manner of wall decoration, it is difficult to go far wrong in selection because of the real beauty of the designs and colorings. It is seldom nowadays that one sees a wall treatment that is bad in itself, though too often its effect is ruined by the draperies or pictures or general arrangement of the room.

If there seems to be a growing tendency toward more elaborate patterns in papers it is due to the increasing simplicity of our furniture and decorations. We are coming to prefer the beauties of architecture to furnishings, of color and lines to bric-a-brac.

Instead of poor pictures in our drawing room or parlor we prefer good papers of artistic worth. If the room is to be kept somewhat formal, papers in the medallion effects are good. French designs, in delightful floral motifs are well adapted to mahogany furnishings. Panel decoration is also most attractive and borders are seen frequently. Golden tan semi-grass cloth was used for the wall-filler, in a border and panel scheme of decoration that was especially tasteful. The border was in soft browns, cream and dull red.

The cut-out friezes add greatly to the charm of a room, particularly those which have high ceilings. Many satisfactory borders produce the effect of the cut-out designs, though not actually cut.

There are borders to be in connection with the side walls. In plain or shadow or blended effect, which are developed from the motif of the wall fabric, that convey a pleasant sense of harmony. With these come narrow binders in the same textures introducing just the right touch of color—a dull blue, or green or mauve.

Among the handsomest papers now being used by the decorators are those called the Favrille Blends. These come in the most grateful colorings and have the effect of being hand tinted.

Landscape friezes are many of them real works of art. There is the Berkshire frieze, vistas of dim and leafy forests, in wonderful greens and there are soft, misty grey symphonies in low tones. The hand-stencilled frieze is considerably used with the Eltonbury silk fibre goods. Several new shades have appeared in this, among the most desirable being mauve grey, and old rose, and several new golds and greens.

Many of the wide French papers may be obtained that match perfectly various drapery fabrics, in both pattern and color, being printed from the same roller. French cretonnes are cleverly reproduced in some of the bedroom papers, and the English chintz designs are fully as charming.

A successful dining room, recently decorated, had a delightful frieze of conventionalized grapes, below which, extending to the wainscot, was a soft green paper, in an all-over, blended design. Below the wainscot was plain greyish green Eltonbury.

Handy Things To Have About the House

A mayonnaise mixer, that shortens considerably the tedious process of making dressing, consists of a porcelain bowl, a small tin funnel that is used as a dropper, which can be adjusted so as to regulate the number of drops desired, and the mixer, which is similar to an eggbeater, that is turned by a small wheel.

A novelty in towel bars is the heavy, twisted glass which serves to prevent the towel from slipping off too easily. Handsome glass bars often display knobs with the many-sided facet cut.

Rice balls of aluminum, with small, round perforations through which the steam percolates, are splendid for cooking rice in Southern style. The ball holds about a cup of rice, and has a hinge at the base by which it is opened.

An electric table range which measures only five inches by ten inches includes kettle and stew pan, and is ideal for the small breakfast.

A cake pan from which the cake may be turned when baked without the least danger of its being broken has a small peg at one side that is removed when the cake is baked. The sides then spring open and the bottom becomes loose so that the cake may be easily removed.

A wooden handle works an apple peeler and corer that is simple and satisfactory. The stand is of iron and it has a steel knife which peels the apple and afterward cores it.

For sixty-five cents one can buy a rolling pin which is covered with a peculiar prepared cloth to which dough positively will not stick. It may be kept in the flour barrel and used many times before it becomes soiled.

a rubber suction cup that will hold the mirror to the wall wherever the light is best.

A kneeling mat of rushes which may be bought for sixty-five cents has a convenient handle, and should prove a boon in any home. Around the front and sides of the mat is an upright portion about four inches high which protects the front of the skirt and knees from the splashing of water.

The favorite style of electric toaster is that having a door at each side on which the bread is laid, which swings outward and downward. When it is in operation the doors are closed; racks open out at the top on which finished toast is kept warm.

The ball iron is a new device which is especially designed to iron the tops of sleeves and other inaccessible corners of apparel. It has a long handle which is removed when the iron is placed on the stove.

A large sheet of plate glass makes an ideal mixing board, because it is so easily kept clean.

A neat arrangement for rinsing brushes is a holder of white enameled tin with a narrow Delft blue band outlining the edge. Under the blue lettered words—Cups, Spouts, Oven Rins, Glasses—are small books, on each of which hangs the designated brush. These may be bought for from $1.50 to $1.35.

New Notes in China Offerings

Some of the salad sets now include a special plate that is placed beneath the salad bowl. White and gold sets are well liked, since they are always in unquestionable taste.

Very beautiful are the salad sets in glassware. The glass is the most delicate, fragile sort imaginable. The plates are very flat, and the bowl is quite plain except for the standard, which is of cut glass. With these are glass spoons and forks, the whole set seeming most appropriate for crisp salads with their green garnishes.

Italian majolica is being used to some extent for special dishes. The soft shades of yellow, green and blue on the rich creamy ground is attractive.

Low fern dishes in white terra cotta, and open work baskets in the modern German ware make delightful center decorations for the family table.

Much of the new china and glassware shows designs that embody the old Greek motifs. Qualit old patterns modeled after those that were popular in our grandmother's time are again being used.

A charming set in white and gold, called the Colonial Band, is made in the octagonal shapes that are very well liked at present.

The new oyster cocktail glasses are bell-shaped and have short stems. These are sometimes decorated handsomely in fruit or flower patterns. A novel pattern that is used for both glassware and china is in imitation of the Chipendale style.

A breakfast set of Brittany ware is unusual and interesting. This ware is made by the Brittany peasants and decorated with the oddest sort of figures of themselves, that are characteristic and comely.

Diehls Wall Papers

Few people realize that wall paper will change the whole aspect of a room. Soft tone—airy—effects will make a small room seem larger, and the big, bare looking apartment may be reduced to cozy dimensions by the use of wall paper of confining perspective. You can give your home a cheerful tone—you can lend warmth and grace—by the color on your walls. You can introduce a refined atmosphere into it by an exquisite shade or blending of shades. The paper on your wall is the most important influence in the house. It is a mistake to neglect it, to allow it to look dingy. Why should it be commonplace when exquisite designs and colorings may be had just as cheaply—with careful selection? Our fall assortments will be a revelation to you of what beautiful effects may be had in wall paper—for very little expense. Let us work out your color problems. We are well equipped for doing so and the service costs you nothing.

What Fashion Has Decided He Shall Wear

MEN'S clothing, meaning suits and overcoats, will return to the normal style this fall. This is practically agreed upon by the custom trade and the ready-to-wear makers alike. According to one of the former, an acknowledged authority in sartorial matters: "We are drawing away from the so-called English style. Clothes will be simply natural this fall, with no frills. The style may be described as American, or perhaps cosmopolitan, would be the better word. Clothes for men will be cut to fit, well balanced, made up in moderation; we will have no padded shoulders, no exaggerated chest. Trousers will be cut moderately close-fitting, and of average length—that is, they will reach to the heel." This style prevails in the output of the ready-to-wear houses. Worsteds, cassimeres, chevots and tweeds, of clearest design and soft finish, will be most popular in the make-up of gentlemen's clothes this fall and winter. Brown effects, greys and blue-greys will be most observable among good dressers during the coming season. Chinchillas will go big, too, according to the opinion of many prominent dealers. Very few double breasted sack coats will be seen on business men. As a rule business coats will carry three buttons, single breasted, with pointed lapel, 30 1/2 or 31 1/2 inches in length, according to the height of the wearer. Very slight demand for the frock, or cutaway, is anticipated, although in suburban or rural localities, where formal dress is seldom worn, the cutaway is always proper for semi-formal functions, and in most cases forms a becoming garment. The fall and winter frocks carry three buttons, only one of which is supposed to be fastened, the edge of the coat rounding with a graceful curve from the centre of the chest to the bottom of the garment, which, from collar to end, is about 35 inches in length. A popular overcoat for the coming season will be a short, belted garment, with a pleat in the back, reaching barely to the knee. In spite of the crusade made against them last year, chinchillas are coming back into the public favor, and will be particularly noticeable in a long, double-breasted coat. In spite of the dissatisfaction the trade has experienced in regard to soft fabrics," said the manager of a well-known high-class ready-to-wear house, just returned from a tour of the European fashion centres, "the public demands them, and they will be worn again—rough, shaggy stuff, and at the end of the season you will find chinchillas very popular. I really believe that the merchant who plunges on them will be left; a great many will be worn, but there will be considerable dissatisfaction. Many manufacturers are experimenting with this kind of coat, but in my judgment there are only three or four manufacturers in the United States who can turn out a really good chinchilla. These sell from $30 up. These coats will be seen in blues, greys and olive brown. As to raglans, the same authority declared: "The raglan has almost seen its last day here. I believe it will die as quickly as it did eight or nine years ago, when it practically died overnight. In fact, when in Europe the only raglans I saw were old ones, that the owners were evidently trying to wear out. I saw more in Berlin than in London, and none at all in Paris." A comfortable garment for fall wear is a box coat, with shawl collar and double breast; but this is too short for winter wear. There are so many different models for sack coats that it is difficult to describe them; but as a rule they are cut with form-fitting shoulders, a soft roll, no pads nor chest exaggeration. Chevots and wools will outnumber the worsteds two to one this winter. Double breasted sacks are also coming in again, and are likely to be quite popular by the time real cold weather sets in. There seems to be a general demand throughout the country for a narrow-shouldered coat; this demand did not exist last year, but is making itself more and more apparent as the fall season advances. This undoubtedly accounts for the abandonment of the padded shoulder that sought to make Reggy and Percy look like real athletes, don't you know? While speaking of the frock coat I should have added that, while not in popular demand, with it should be worn grey striped trousers, while the vest may be of the same material as the coat, or a white one. If the black vest is worn, the demi-vest, with white edging, is proper; with this should go an ascot tie and a winged collar. Cloth-topped shoes, pearl-grey gloves and a silk hat complete this semi-formal dress. There will be a big call for Norfolk suits this fall, I am assured by persons who should know. This jacket always makes a comfortable, useful and nobody outing garment, for automobiling and practically every sort of outdoor sport. As a matter of fact, many well-groomed men wear them to business. Others keep one at the office and don it when they assume the duties of the day. The Norfolk also makes an excellent lounging coat to wear around the house, in the library, smoking or billiard room. This fall the Norfolk will be made principally from a chevot in fancy patterns. Vests this fall will show a general tendency to a high cut—high enough to be visible above the lapel when the coat is buttoned. Vests are made for the coming season without collars, and will carry five and six buttons. Opinions seem to differ as to the demand for fancy vests. A few houses which make a specialty of this kind of garment are making vigorous efforts to push them, and report that they are meeting with great success in this line; but the trade in general seems to have little use for them. The "peg-top" effect has vanished entirely from the trousers made for the fall and winter season. While not exactly tight, they are made more snug, more close-fitting, than for a long time past. The "cuff" at the bottom of the legs will be noticeable only by its absence, and the trousers will reach to the heels.

Newest Ideas in Fall Furnishings

By Orville G. Victor

notice: this is a return to the comfortable, low, widespread collar with pointed ends that was fashionable long before high "standups" were introduced. Man of mature years, and men with a tendency to embonpoint welcome these collars.

The wing collar will be worn chiefly with the ascot tie. The wings will be a bit larger and more pronounced than those of last season. They, and the low collar mentioned above, will also be in demand as an accompaniment to bat-wing ties. The regulation "poke" will hold its own for formal dress, averaging 2½ inches in height.

NECKWEAR.

Ascots and bat-wing ties have been restored to favor, and the former will be worn very largely in place of the four-in-hand in conjunction with the cutaway coat. It is also perfectly permissible with ordinary business sack, and is best worn with a wing collar, fastened with a plain gold safety pin.

Absolutely no limit exists as to the range of fancy permitted a man in the selection of his neckwear for the fall and winter season of 1912-1913. Crochets are destined to meet with special favor this autumn, in all sorts of striped effects and popular stitches.

The bat-wing tie will soon be on sale everywhere, having met the approval of "the powers that be" for the coming season. The man who prefers to display a stud in the bosom of his starched or semi-stiff shirt, rather than a pin in his four-in-hand necktie, will welcome the return of the bow.

The nicest of these are in plain colors, shadow stripes or polka dots. Some will be made up in foulard, with shadow spots; others in different kinds of silk, with Persian designs. They will be made square at the ends, and tied loosely, the shadow designs making some of them resemble great moths or sober-hued butterflies. The bat-wing may be worn with any sort of a shirt, soft, semi-stiff or starched, and with any style of collar.

The old-fashioned term "cravat" is again found in the vocabulary of the trade. Many of these prepared for the fall-winter season show rare combinations of coloring. Some of these are knitted of bright, natural silk, in popular stitches and novelty effects, made of Bengaines, crepes, Failles and foulards.

There is no evidence of the anticipated decline in the demand for knit and crocheted goods. Among the higher class trade is a disposition to advance the cut-silk variety. For the first time in several years it is hardly possible to name any two or three colors or color combinations that will prevail above others for the autumn season. The range of buyers' selections up to date cover the entire chromatic scale, while brilliant effects are prominent. In knit goods, bars and cross stripes are mostly in evidence; while cut-silk designs are for the most part restrained to short-bias stripes and small figures.

The accordion weave four-in-hand is too great a favorite to be abandoned, and will remain throughout the winter. So will the long flowing scarfs in Persian designs and scrolls. The color combinations in all these are so numerous as to defy description. Bias stripes in three-color combinations will be especially popular among the younger set; while a novelty that may or may not meet with general approval is an accordion-weave with what is known as the "lace effect." This is handsome, and, in spite of its title, is not effeminate in appearance.

Combination sets, of four-in-hand, sock and handkerchief in the same design—that is, the same color effect, will be popular this fall, especially with those who wear oxfords or pumps, displaying the hose at the ankle.

SOX.

The demand for the higher grade of sock continues to increase with a steadiness that is pleasing to many dealers and manufacturers as well. It is a demand, too, that the general public has entered into without hesitation, for this higher grade footwear can now be purchased at prices that every well-dressed man can afford.

Silk and silk-and-lisle half-hose are almost universally worn, and dealers declare that this will continue so throughout the coming fall and winter. Of course, there are dozens of standard makes of hosiery that contain neither silk nor lisle-thread, and these will always hold their own, especially during cold weather.

A novelty in the line of hosiery, prepared for the fall trade, is a silk or silk-and-lisle sock with cashmere sole. It is claimed that this will outwear the usual silk or combination hose and that the cashmere will more readily absorb the perspiration of the foot.

UNDERWEAR.

Some dealers declare that the advent of cool weather will in no way affect the popularity of the so-called "athletic" union suits, meaning the sort that have no sleeves, and reach only to the knees. But others assert that while this may be so, in regard to young chaps with athletic ambitions, full-length suits will have the call, both in union and two-piece garments. Of course, this matter is one of purely personal preference, both as to material and style. Underwear made up for the fall and winter season comprises linens, twills, muscoks, cambric, madras, silk and other fabrics, including cotton, woolsens and balbriggans. There is no question that the union suit is gaining steadily in popularity, for it has many points in its favor and only one to its disadvantage. And this may be obviated by securing a proper fit when purchasing, and by selecting material that will not shrink even under the cruel treatment of the steam laundry.

Fall Hat Fashion

WHEN the straw hats are cast into the discard, and the wearers thereof look around for suitable headgear for fall and winter wear, they will find the most remarkable variety of hats ever devised for the masculine sex. And, aside from the formal derby that a few men insist upon wearing all the time, the soft hat will be more popular than ever, and will be offered in countless designs, made of various fabrics. Of course, the man who pays careful attention to his wardrobe, always has a derby on hand as a matter of course, just as he has a silk hat for formal occasions. But if he desires to create or maintain a reputation as a fashionable dresser, he will add to his wardrobe at least one soft hat this fall, and another for the later season.

At the top of the column the velour holds sway. These velours, real and imitation, may be secured in practically any color, with bands of the same, or contrasting shades. Some of them, of royal purple, olive green, crimson or blue, are gaudy in the extreme, and are designed principally for men who desire to attract attention. But, on the contrary, the great majority are made in modest colors, unobtrusive in appearance, and, because of their soft material, readily adapted to the shape of any head.

Hats with crown from 5¼ to 6 inches in height, and a moderately wide, curled brim, made from tweeds and other cloths, in plain or plaid effects, promise to be exceedingly popular. As a rule, these hats will be worn in Alpine shape; though the younger man may prefer the "telescope," either of which may be achieved with the same hat.

For the most part, greys and browns will prevail among the cloth hats, with the former in the lead. Some will show bands of the same material as the hat, while others will have ribbon bands of contrasting color.

A hat that is expected to take well with the younger element is of soft felt, in mottled grey and black, with black band, and another of brownish grey, with a dark brown band. Both of these are very nobby and can be worn to advantage by most young men. They promise to be much in evidence at the big football games this fall.

The rough, hairy "scratch-ups" that prevailed last winter are to be replaced with nice, smooth makeups in many colors, resembling the skins of animals. It is up to the taste of the wearer to say how he prefers the brim adjusted. Some will prefer to turn it down in front or on one side, as if to give it a slight military effect; but what is regarded as the most stylish way is to keep the brim in its natural shape, turned up front, back and sides.

The low-crown, wide-brim derby that made its appearance two seasons ago will be accentuated for the coming season, with a crown not more than 4½ inches high and a brim from 2 to 2½ inches wide, nearly flat. As with its predecessor, this hat will be worn mainly by the younger man; but it should be set squarely on the head, and not tilted to the back like the affected style of last year.

Other stiff hats, with crowns from 5 to 5½ inches high and brims not more than 1½ inches in width, slightly curled, will appeal to the older element.

The silk hat for the coming season is in two styles—one for the older man and one for the younger. Each of these will be conservative in shape, with no "bell" to speak of, and the brim of each will be nearly flat. For the elderly man, the crown will be 5½ inches high, with a brim from 1½ to 2½ inches high; for the younger, the silk hat will be 5½ inches high, with brim 1½ or 1¾ inches wide, with a scarcely perceptible curl.

Except for motoring, golf, tennis and other outdoor amusements, caps are practically taboo among men, although they will be in great favor among schoolboys when the fall term begins. Stripes and plaids prevail, mostly in combinations of grey.

GLOVES.

An extraordinary variety of material is found in the gloves made for men's wear during the approaching season, including glace kid, chevrete, suede, reindeer skin, chamol, cape, mocha and doeskin. These are made in practically the same shapes, with three darts on the back and outside seams. For the most part, they are fastened with two buttons, bearing the name of the maker; although some may be seen with clasps instead of buttons.

For gloves, for motoring wear, etc., are also to be found in remarkable variety for winter use, including racoon skin, natural muskrat, blended muskrat, Persian lamb, electric seal, Hudson seal, near seal, Thibet buffalo, Kanaka wolf and grey kid goat.

For ordinary business wear and pedestrian exercise, the tan glove, in several shades, will continue in favor throughout the season.

NOVELTIES.

The man of refined dress exhibits little jewelry nowadays. Big diamond shirt studs are de trop; so are gorgeous finger-rings or necktie pins. The watchfob, too, will be out of place this season, and to be perfectly correct the man of fashion must wear a slender chain straight across from one vest pocket to the other, passing through a button-hole; or, he may carry his watch in the outside breast pocket of his cutaway or sack, attached to a slender chain which in turn must be fastened to a metal button bearing his monogram. If he wears a four-in-hand tie, a similar monogram should be engraved upon the tie-clip, as well as on the signet ring, which should be worn on the third finger of the right hand.

Suit studs, to be in style, must be almost unnoticeable, of plain gold or pearl, not larger than the smallest pea or a good sized pinhead.

An infinite variety of stick pins is on hand for the adornment of four-in-hands and ascots; but for the most part these are of inconspicuous design, small in size and refined in appearance.

Fall Fashions in Shoes

Copyright, 1912 by I. J. Robinson.

By Orville E. Victor

HIGH laced tan shoes will be in favor as soon as the oxfords and pumps are laid aside at the close of summer, and will continue to be worn until the snow falls—and then some, perhaps. This is the universal opinion of manufacturers and dealers, big and little.

"One curious thing about shoes, or shoe styles," says one dealer, "is that the farther west one goes, the more universal we find the use of the high toe, known as the bulldog toe; while the farther east one travels, the fewer are seen."

Be that as it may, the "bulldog" toe is certainly comfortable, and may be found on plenty of shoes designed for the fall and winter trade. A nice shoe on the market for fall delivery is a russett hal, with flat heel, made on a new English last and designed to take the place of another style which seems to have lost its former popularity.

A very handsome tan shoe, with ten eyelets, is also among the footwear provided for the coming season. This is made on an almost straight last, with toe nearly pointed, and a low, flat heel, in striking contrast to the "bulldog" toe and the military heel. A popular season is predicted for this shoe by its manufacturers.

The swing last is disappearing. A nice shoe for afternoon or evening wear is made of patent leather, in dress effect; this shoe has a cloth top and carries seven buttons. It is made on a flat last, with drop toe; it is comfortable to the foot, and is good-looking.

A nice shoe for men is made of fine kid blucher, with a single sole. For heavy wear, or walking exercises, the same may be obtained with double sole. A wax calf, with single sole and extension heel, is not very handsome, but it is certainly most comfortable, and will stand for a deal of wear.

Patent calf and fine kid laced shoes will be worn a great deal during the coming season by well-dressed men; for a semi-dress shoe a patent leather, with six buttons, will probably be one of the most popular. A patent colt, with cloth top, is also likely to be a favorite. Old-fashioned Congress gaiters are on display, too, and it is predicted that many men of middle age and older will welcome their return. These are made in kid and in calf. Fine kid blucher and Russian calf blucher, laced shoes, promise good returns; also a nice kid button shoe.

As a rule, both black and tan shoes for fall and winter wear are being made higher than usual; few of them have less than ten eyelets or hooks for the laces. The military heel vies with the low, flat heel for the public favor; they will probably sell about equally, except among younger men who prefer the high heel.

Like most everything else, shoes have followed the fashion so far as the "high cost of living" is concerned, and many standard makes will be a bit higher this fall than they were last autumn.

Like their fathers, boys will wear both black and tan shoes and oxfords throughout the fall. The oxford line for the coming season includes russett calf, black kid, box calf, wax calf and violet kid.

To a large degree the same materials are to be found in shoes, lace and buttons. A nice dress shoe for boys and youths will be found in the velvet calf button and the patent colt button. The same may be secured in laced style.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

IMPROVING ONE'S AIM.

ALMOST everyone in this world is trying in some way to improve his condition, to earn more money, to be a better citizen, to win some desirable place in his little world, to enlarge his circle of friends. About half of us are failing.

Why? Well, for one thing because we do not make our efforts at getting on, more definite and reasoning.

Half a dozen grown up children engaged in a game of bean-bags the other day. At the beginning of the game all were about equally bad in their aim, but soon two men emerged from the ranks and distinguished themselves by their successful throws. Each round their throws were more and more accurate, until finally their scores neared the 100 per cent of possible points.

"What a good eye you must have!" I commented to one of these men after the game.

"I don't think so," he said. "Didn't you notice how terrible I threw at first? But you see, I watched myself to see just where I was failing and tried to correct it. I was overshooting at first so I deliberately tried to go lighter. The trouble with you people was that you just threw haphazard. You could have done just as well as I if you had really tried. Didn't you see that Mrs. S. threw just too far to the right every time? If she had only deliberately thrown more to the left she would have scored right straight along."

This young man is successfully carrying through a difficult business situation in which older heads than his have failed.

Do you wonder? I don't. It is evident that he carries his philosophy of bean-bags into business life. And it succeeds in one case just as it does in the other.

Tell me, are you improving your aim as definitely as you can at each throw?

Or are you failing to score because you make the same needless mistakes round after round in the game of life?

"I am not a good mixer," a young man said to himself a few years ago, after he had been studying why he failed to make as high a score as he desired. "I can learn to get along with my fellowmen more successfully and I will. I'll make a definite study of the matter."

"Today this man is a highly successful commercial traveler and his ability to 'mix' with all sorts of people is considered one of his biggest assets."

Just where is your aim bad? Just where are you failing to score? Are you overshooting or undershooting? Are you losing efficiency by inability to "mix" well, or by taking too little care of your health, or by lack of education, or how?

"The trouble with you people is that you just throw haphazard," said the successful young man. It is the trouble with most of the failures in the world.

"Know thyself" in all its meanings is just as much the motto of success today in America as it was some hundreds of years ago in Athens.

stead of staying home and reading the Sunday paper or working about the premises, the way you do."

"Well," said the other man, as he took a fresh grip on the lawn mower preparatory to finishing the rest of the lawn, "maybe you're right—from your point of view. But there are other points of view, you know. And mine is to this effect:

"If the ministers and you and all the rest of the good church people will go to work and shorten the hours of work during the week, and see that working people get at least one-half holiday a week all the year 'round, you'll find more of us willing to spare time for church on Sunday."

"There's work to do around my premises. I haven't the money to hire it done. My wife can't be expected to do it. I've got a right to have a decent home and it takes work to keep it decent. I leave here early every weekday morning and I get home at dark, dead tired. There isn't much time or ambition to do chores. So I do 'em Sunday, and I guess I'm just as religious, mowing this lawn here Sunday morning as you are singing hymns in the church over yonder."

"I don't do anybody any harm. I try to do my little share of good. Do you do any more? And I guess I deserve my little recreation that I can get out of my one holiday, while the fellows that pay my salary and keep my nose to the grindstone all week has time to go motoring on weekdays and sit in his pew on Sundays."

"That's my point of view," he cheerfully ended, as he proceeded to drown further discussion in the music of the lawn mower.

The Kitchen Cabinet

PIDDINGS, my friend, do a mission fulfill. They add to the dinner, as well as the bill—

They cause men to wish, with ardor they may, That the meal, which foretells them, came three times a day.

GOOD EATINGS.

Mock Terrapin.—Here is a good supper dish. Half a calf's liver, season and fry; chop not too fine, dust thickly with flour and a teaspoonful of mixed mustard, a dash of cayenne, two hard cooked eggs chopped fine, two tablespoonfuls of butter and a cupful of water. Cook all together for a minute or two and serve hot.

French Soup.—Take a pint of milk, put it on to boil. Beat an egg, add a tablespoonful of sugar and stir with a pounded cracker into the hot milk. It needs very little cooking. Serve hot or cold.

Pea Soup.—To a quart of water add a pint of dry peas and let soak overnight, then boil in the same water for an hour; change the water, add a pound of salt pork or corned beef. Boil until soft, season as desired with onion, pepper and salt.

Dutch Pudding.—Mix half a cup of cream of wheat or farina with four tablespoonfuls of cocoa, half a teaspoonful of salt in a bowl; put over hot water and pour over three cups of boiling milk. Cook until smooth (about twenty minutes), add a tablespoonful of butter. Beat the egg and add folded lightly in.

Bird's Nest Pudding.—Now that good cooking apples are in the market, this is an acceptable dessert: Pare and core sufficient apples to cover the bottom of a pie plate. Make a biscuit dough, soft enough to spread over the apples, and bake in a hot oven. Turn onto a plate, apples on top, spread generously with butter, sprinkle with sugar and nutmeg and serve with or without cream.

Ham Canapes.—Cut bread into slices a fourth of an inch thick, then cut with a small biscuit cutter into rounds; fry to a delicate brown in hot fat. Pound a cup of boiled ham to a paste, add two tablespoonfuls of Parmesan cheese, season with salt and paprika. Spread this mixture over the toasted circles and brown in the oven. A delicious dish may be prepared by serving a little chopped boiled ham in white sauce, poured over hot toast.

NON-FLESH DIET GIVES BEST ENDURANCE.

Prof. W. Earl Flynn, who holds a record in athletics, believes that the best endurance in physical work can be maintained only by excluding flesh meat from the ration. In support of this position he quotes the experiments of Prof. Fisher, of Yale, who found that in such tests of endurance as holding the arms at right angles to the body abstainers from meat showed much greater endurance than flesh eaters. No experiments have been made to test the relative mental capacity of mental workers with reference to meat consumption, but it is reasonable to suppose that the same difference would be found.

Heart and Home Problems

by MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson—I am a girl desperately in love with a young man of 18. He was very friendly with me at first, but a girl told me to play a dirty trick on him, which I did, and I have been heartbroken ever since for he does not love me so much. What can I do to get back his friendship?

HEARTBROKEN BLUE EYES.
Next time you see him, little girl, go right straight to him and tell him you are sorry; that you didn't think what you were doing and you'll never do another unkind thing to him or anybody else if you can help it.

As for the girl, I would cut her acquaintance. She is not made of good enough stuff for a friend. Hereafter, my dear, listen to your own heart and common sense before you follow such advice.

Dear Mrs. Thompson—I am a girl of 18. I was out with a gentleman of my age when it was raining. When we got home he borrowed my umbrella, saying he would bring it back on Saturday. He didn't come and I haven't seen him since. I sent him a card asking for my umbrella and he does not answer. The umbrella is not mine, so I care very much.

MISS CLARA.
I'm afraid the young man is not very honest. Have you a brother or any boy friend whom you could send to this man's house, to get the umbrella for you?

Tell the truth to the party to whom the umbrella belongs and say that you will buy a new one if the old one is not returned. Then you might send the bill to the man who kept the umbrella.

ANSWER FOR OLIVER.—I do not know the disease you mention. There are free medical dispensaries in your city. Suppose you ask advice there.

ANSWER FOR MRS. M. J.—I do not keep any of the letters after they are answered, so am unable to return the one which you ask.

Dear Mrs. Thompson—I am a girl of 15. For the last two years I have had things around my eyes and cannot think what causes them. Can you tell me a remedy? ANXIOUS.
Better consult a good doctor, my dear. Sometimes dark rings mean a serious kidney disease.

Dear Mrs. Thompson—How can I wash a skirt made of Panama goods? SARAH.
Better have it dry cleaned.

HOUSEHOLD TALKS

by Henrietta D. Grauel

Company dinners are usually tiresome affairs because of their uniformity; when one is given with a new dish or a new fruit, or some new departure from the beaten path, it is interesting.

A company dinner that was transpired from start to finish began with fish consommé, clarified. It was brought to the host in a shallow tureen, on a large platter garnished with shrimp timbales, green pea timbales and potato bouillottes, with an inside border of richly creamed rice.

The recipe for the shrimp timbale is half a pint of shrimp purée, two spoonfuls of white sauce, six egg yolks crushed, with salt, pepper and nutmeg for seasoning.

Guinea fowl fillets that have been breaded and fried in deep fat to a tempting golden brown, and served on individual platters with a circle of sliced, breaded, fried tomatoes surrounding each fillet, and furthermore garnished with shallots and button mushrooms, came next.

The salad that followed this was made of very small, fresh oysters, said to be from the first haul of this season.

The chef told me the oysters were parboiled in their own liquor and allowed to remain in it until cold. Then they were drained and mixed with mild French dressing and minced celery. The finished creation was garnished with curled celery and very thick mayonnaise dressing piped on for decoration.

The desert was a Spanish cantaloupe. This Panama delicacy only appeared on our northern markets within the last ten days.

The fruit is half as large as a good sized watermelon, and the rind is protected by a coarse husk. It is of pronounced flavor similar to our Rocky Ford melons and so sweet that it is served without sugar. Swift transportation has brought this splendid fruit to our attention and Yankee thrift will soon place home-grown specimens in our reach for the seeds of those brought to Cleveland have been sent to some country gentleman who will plant them.

The conversation turned upon Count Rumford, whose motto was "A truly great person is one who will do anything to promote the interests of his fellowmen." The father of one of the guests had known the count when he was only Benjamin Thompson, living in Concord, Mass., and that even when he was experimenting with Indian meal, and urging his neighbors to eat it in the form of mush which he called "hasty pudding."

He wrote his directions to Benjamin Franklin: "Proportion the quantity of water to the amount of meal. Two of the first to one of the latter. Salt the water and when it boils take up the Indian meal in small quantities in the left hand and let it sit through the fingers into the kettle of water while you stir it with a wooden spoon held in the right hand. When the meal is in continue cooking until the mass will hold the spoon in an upright position. When it is proof it is done."

The count even gave directions to his friend on how to eat hasty pudding, and these were incorporated in an address on "Frugality" given by Rumford many years later when Franklin was in Bavaria experimenting.

HERPICIDE IS THE ORIGINAL DANDRUFF GERM DESTROYER

Just because you happen to see or hear the statement somewhere that another preparation will kill the dandruff germ, stop falling hair and is just as good as Herpicide, don't be fooled and allow yourself to be swindled out of your money.

You want Newbro's Herpicide, the remedy that has been tried, has stood the test of time and now has more satisfied users than all other similar preparations combined. An attempt to sell you something else is merely another effort to profit from the good name established by the only genuine dandruff germ destroyer.

CHARMING GOWN OF PINK CHARMEUSE

Here is a charming gown of flesh pink charmeuse trimmed with milk white bead embroidery. Turnover collar and cuffs of the material. Draped belt of same. Plated fringe of white net trim either side of the front of the bodice. The diagonally cut upper tunic is mounted over a second tunic of plaited pink tulle embroidered and finished with a trimming of wool roses, the whole being mounted over a plain underskirt of the charmeuse. The waist fastens at the front and the skirt over the left hip.

Easy Mistake to Make.

Farmer Andrews says that he made a mistake last week in stating that his wife had died of cancer. The item should have read that he had lost a cow by lump-jaw. These things happen occasionally, and we are always glad to correct them. It is easy to get women and cows mixed up—Hometown (Pa.) Banner.

Show Yourself.
Little Marjorie was showing her new birthday toys to grandpa, when her mother told the girl to let grandpa show them to himself. Marjorie was unwilling to do this because she wished to do the exhibiting. Then an idea struck her. "Here, grandpa," she said, handing him a toy at a time as she spoke, "show yourself my dolly, show yourself my blocks." And thus she went through the collection.—Judge.

Situations That Produce Indifference.
There are situations in which hope and fear run together, in which they mutually destroy one another, and lose themselves in a dull indifference. If it were not so, how could we bear to know of those who are most dear to us being in hourly peril, and yet go on as usual with our ordinary everyday life?

THE BLESSING OF MOTHERHOOD

Healthy Mothers and Children Make Happy Homes

Motherhood is woman's highest sphere in life. It is the fruition of her dearest hopes and greatest desires; yet thousands of noble women through some derangement have been denied this blessing.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong. San Antonio, Texas.—"To all women who desire to have children in their homes and to be well and happy I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I suffered from a displacement and other female weakness. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was the only remedy that ever helped me, and now I am a happy mother and highly recommend your medicine to all my friends."—Mrs. A. B. MARTINEZ, 121 S. Laredo St., San Antonio, Texas.

Brooklyn, N.Y.—"I was ailing all the time and did not know what the matter was. I wanted a baby but my health would not permit it. I was nervous, my side ached and I was all run down. I heard that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was good and took the medicine. I have now a beautiful baby and your Compound has helped me in every way."—Mrs. J. J. ### The Graciousness of Anne

RUTH was feeling just a trifle despondent. She was going to a little afternoon affair at Anne's and she didn't have just the clothes in keeping with Anne's smart style of living.

For Anne dwelt in a very lovely home on a fashionable country road. She had more money than she could use, without thinking hard how to do it. And she wore lovely gowns and beautiful jewels and had a motor, and, from Ruth's point of view, almost everything that made life desirable.

So Ruth as she looked at her plain, inexpensive dress felt just a trifle dispirited.

But Ruth, though she was one of Anne's chums, hadn't sounded all the depths of Anne's nature. For as she went in to take off her hat, Anne said: "You look perfectly sweet, dear, in that dress. You have just the right lines for your figure."

At which Ruth chirped up a bit.

Later, when some discussion brought up the question of watches, Anne said, "I do so like that silver watch of yours, Ruth. There's something so dainty and refined about it. And I like that second-hand too. I'm going to get a watch for myself just like it."

And at this, Ruth was chirped up more. For to have the wealthy and lovely Anne copy her in some article of dress was a compliment indeed.

And thus all the afternoon, whenever it came Anne's way to say a gracious thing, she said it. And Ruth went home feeling quite satisfied with herself and her clothes. Without exactly stating it, Anne had made her feel that taste in dress was the equal of money. And so, because of Anne's graciousness and kindness, Ruth not only had a delightful afternoon, but all her repinings about her clothes vanished into nothingness.

"It was lovely of Anne, wasn't it?" Ruth confided to her mother, as she sat on the porch and discussed the afternoon's affair. "She might, even though unintentionally, have made me feel quite uncomfortable. But instead, she saw all the little details she could say nice things about and she said them; and she was so sincere in her admiration that I really felt quite set up. It isn't often you find a wealthy girl like that."

And since she couldn't have costly dresses, Ruth decided to go in for details that would give charm and personality. For she knew that if she had caught Anne's eye and pleased her with these things, she could make the same impression on others by the same method. And so she need not, because of lack of money, give up those whose society she really enjoyed, but who had more of this world's goods than she had, and whose invitations she had been somewhat doubtful about accepting because she could not dress or entertain as they did. Anne's gentleness had put these things to her in a new light.

A WOMAN'S OBSERVATIONS

by Edna K. Woolley

clared she was only suffering from 'one of my old headaches.' Her soul may be writhing in mortal agony, but a woman will attempt to smile and hide it all, accepting only such sympathy as may be tendered for her excuse of 'that headache.'

"Headache! Spell it 'heartache' a large part of the time, when it's a woman's excuse, and you'll be nearer the truth. It's woman's little white lie, her defense, her cloak for many things—even real illnesses sometimes. And we've accepted it as such a common thing that we look upon women as a headache sort of people, anyway, and let it go at that."

"Believe me, the woman whose home life is happy, whose husband is kind to her, whose lover is faithful, whose children are ordinarily good, whose friends are not a disappointment and whose relatives do not harass her doesn't have so many so-called headaches. And it isn't headache powders, but heart's ease, that will cure at least half the headaches that women have."

The one man gazed with exceeding disapproval upon the other.

"You ought to go to church and at least furnish a good example to the younger generation," he said, "in-

FACE ALL RED SPOTS AND BLISTERS

Rubbed and Scratched. Would Cry and Fret. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Face Got Well.

632 N. 5th St., Terre Haute, Ind.—"My little nephew, a boy of four years, had a breaking out on his face. It was little red spots at first then he would rub and scratch and water blisters would form and wherever the water would run another would come until his face was covered with them. He would cry and fret. His mother got some medicine, but it did not do any good. She would scream and cry and say it hurt. We hardly knew him; his little face was all red spots and blisters. So I begged him to let me put some Cuticura Ointment on them. The next morning I made a strong soap suds with Cuticura Soap and washed his face in the warm suds. The little blisters burst by pressing the cloth on them. After I had his face washed, I put the Cuticura Ointment on and in a short time his little face was all red and dry. I kept using the Cuticura Soap and putting on the Cuticura Ointment and his face got well and it did not leave a scar. He was entirely cured in about one week and a half." EXPENSES OF COLLECTING MIWAUKEE GARBAGE LOW

Commissioner Simmons Finds It Below Eleven Cities' Average—May Fall Below $2.00 Mark.

(Milwaukee Sentinel.) From statistics furnished by other cities, Commissioner Simmons finds the average cost of collecting mixed refuse and garbage in eleven cities in the United States is $2.42 at Milwaukee's cost last year was $2.33 and this year $2.30, while it was $2.55 two years ago when the new incinerator plant was started.

In Buffalo, the figures are $2.19; in Chicago, because of the long hauls, $3.42; in Columbus, O., $1.88, a smaller city and consequently with shorter hauls, and in Minneapolis, where garbage and ashes are figured together, $1.92. If Milwaukee figured in its ash collections Commissioner Simmons says the Milwaukee figures would probably be as low as those of Minneapolis, for it costs only about 50 cents a ton to handle the ashes.

"This fall and winter I intend to try to figure some means of bringing the cost of our garbage collection below the $2 mark," said the commissioner. "One way of effecting a saving would be arranging for a service on the railroads and the collection of garbage on the north side its transfer to cars and its transportation over the railroads to the incinerator, greatly decreasing the haul by team and therefore lowering the cost. This is only one of the plans on which I expect to get figures. The project of night hauls over the street railway tracks may also be considered, although it is open to more objections."

FOND DU LAC APPROPRIATES $13,000 FOR STREET REPAIRS

City Undertakes Work But Intends To Make Contractors Pay According To Agreements Made.

At a meeting of the common council held Monday evening a report of the board of public works asking for $13,000 with which to make the necessary repairs on the East First, Third and Fourth street pavements was adopted and the appropriation granted. The contract for the work was awarded to George H. Stanchfield, whose bid was the lowest and the cost of the repairs will be collected from the companies which had previously laid the pavements and which are under contract to make all necessary repairs.

The action of the council in awarding the contract for the work followed a thorough investigation of the case by city officials. Notices have been repeatedly served on the paving companies which built the streets but were not heeded and it became necessary for the city to take charge of the work itself.

The city officials are confident that they will be able to recover all of the costs of making the repairs and have consulted considerable legal talent in determining the legality of the contracts. Fond du Lac Register.

HITCHING POST CENSUS IS TAKEN IN ROCKFORD

Police Department Takes Observations For The Purpose of Determining If Number Is Sufficient.

Observation made by the Rockford police department is that there is a sufficient number of hitching posts to meet all demands in fact, a showing is made that none of the posts are used to the extent that there is any crowding. There is no time during what is termed the busiest part of the day that all posts have been found to be occupied.

The department has found there are 268 posts, placed at sixteen centers throughout the city, although none in the business district are included in the report. The department finds 53 posts were occupied at stated periods during the day, leaving more than 200 vacant posts. The observation was made Aug. 28, 29, 30 and 31 and Sept. 2 and 3.

The hours taken for comparison were in the middle of the forenoon and middle of the afternoon, when the posts would be most likely to be occupied. The period was for one hour.

GALENA WILL BE A SUNDAY SCHOOL TOWN

A dispatch from Galena says that that city hereafter on Sunday will be as dry as a desert and no matter if a man's tongue is hanging out for want of a drink, it will be impossible to quench his thirst unless he hits up a nearby fountain. Fair week in Galena will see the gamblers who infest the city each year looking for new watering grounds. Of course, if any kind of game is allowed, and the country youth who comes to town looking for a way to pick up some easy money will be disappointed. During fair week for years past games of all kinds were allowed on the grounds and in the saloons down town, but not this year. Even the old army game, "chuck-luck," will be tabooed.

MARINETTE IS INVADED BY ARMY OF SQUIRRELS

Shade Trees of City Filled With Little Animals—Three Different Varieties Are Noted.

A migratory army of squirrels of different varieties has struck Marinette and the shade trees around the city are fairly filled with the little animals.

One large black squirrel was killed by a resident near Park Ridge avenue after it had amused the children and even adults all day with its antics in the shade trees.

Another immense black squirrel was seen on Marinette avenue. A large number of grey squirrels have been seen in various places in the city and red squirrels are common.

This is the first time that squirrels have been seen in any number in either of the two cities although the cities south of Marinette in Wisconsin are so infested with the little animals that they have become almost a nuisance.—Eagle Star.

APPLETON AWARDS CONTRACTS FOR WATERWORKS EXTENSION

The first contracts in connection with the extensive water works improvement work to be done at Appleton have been left by the city commission, when about $125,000 worth of the work was arranged for. It is probable the deal for the purchase of the filter plant site will be closed today with the Fox River Paper company. Other contracts in connection with this work will probably be let in a short time. The intention is to get started on actual construction at the earliest possible date.

ROCKFORD GARBAGE MEN MUST BEGIN WORK EARLY

The Rockford garbage contractor was given a jolt when he was informed by the health department to start his day's work at an earlier hour and to clean up all the territory that is assigned to him. The order is to get up with the birds hustle around and collect the garbage before the sun reaches the meridian.

From all parts of the city the cry has come for relief. Garbage cans are filled to overflowing and are finally emptied when complaint is made to the department. The patience of many people has been sorely taxed and their words of disgust would fill a large book.—Register Gazette.

GOVERNMENT ENGINEERS DROP HARBOR WORK IN SHEBOYGAN

The United States engineers who came to Sheboygan recently to survey the local harbor with relation to the proposed new breakwater have been obliged to give up the work owing to stormy weather. The taking has been so rough that soundings and bearings could not be made. It is expected the engineers will come again later to complete their work.

Vote On Sewer Bonds.

An ordinance has been adopted by the Racine council to submit to a vote of the people the question of issuing $185,000 trunk sewer bonds. Petitions signed by several hundred property owners requesting a vote on such bond issue were presented to the common council.

Pass Sewer Ordinance.

A sewer ordinance has been passed at Stoughton by the provisions of which all privy vaults or sinks in the city are ordered discontinued by July 1, 1913, and in certain specified sections of the city connection with public sewer must be made by the first of next December, while in other blocks the specified time is July 1st of next year.

Finds Filtration Unnecessary.

In a communication to the common council of Racine, Mayor Goodland declares that tests of water pumped from Lake Michigan show that it is not contaminated and that filtration is unnecessary, but that during the spring and fall months it is advisable to boil the water before being used for drinking purposes.

Praises Municipal Dock.

Marinette's municipal dock came in for some warm praise by Major Tompkins, the assistant United States engineer who is here to make inquiries concerning the proposed deepening of the Menominee river for the purposes of navigation above the Ogden street bridge.—Marinette Eagle Star.

Opens New Playground.

Thomas Wright school at Detroit formally opened its new playground. Money to secure apparatus for the playground was solicited by the pupils last spring and much success was encountered. As a result the grounds are well equipped with swings, and other accessories to make the little folks happy.

Boulevarding Main Street.

Reedsburg, Wis.—The Sweeney Bros. have a crew of men at work on the new Main street boulevard and they are pushing things right along. One can almost see the grass and flowers. The original plan which called for twenty feet of road on each side and twenty feet between the roads for the boulevard is being carried out.

Popularity.

One of the first things a man who intends to be popular must learn is to play to the gallery.

WHY WHO'S WHO.

(By Howard L. Rann.)

Were you aware that John D. Rockefeller celebrated his 73d birthday recently in the full possession of his faculties and a bright, new, rebuilt appetite?

It is reported that on this day in question Mr. Rockefeller took off his horns and cloven hoofs and sat down to a meal that would make a section hand wince.

Several years ago Mr. Rockefeller couldn't tell his appetite from any other part of his body.

He would leave it lying around the house for days at a time and never miss it. His stomach was not on speaking terms with anything except corn meal mush, and he used to try to exchange with some of the birds, but when the conversation turned on corn on the cob or raspberries and cream or pineapple sherbet he went into a reverie and moved to adjourn.

Recently, however, Mr. Rockefeller found his appetite just where he left it a few years ago. He recognized it the moment he saw it. It had not changed much and he put it to work at once. It is said to be a better appetite than it was before. Standard Oil was dissolved into thin air. This was the only form of dissolution on record in which the corpse did not participate.

Mr. Rockefeller was a poor boy, but he soon got over it and has always had plenty of ready money. He is considered well to do, and can borrow a reasonable sum at the bank without getting a signer. He is able to keep several automobiles, as his gasoline doesn't cost him anything, and whenever he wants a clean shirt he can have it.

Mr. Rockefeller divides his time between playing golf and throwing large, eloquent drafts at people who are not afraid of tainted money. There are so few who are afraid that he has to use a fountain pen. Every once in a while some church which has been left out will rise up through his minister and denounce Mr. Rockefeller and all his works, including the recent advance in lubricating oil, but up to date none of the uplift magazines have been called upon to return any of his checks in a haughty tone of voice.

THROBBING HEADACHE? IT'S YOUR LIVER, YOU'RE BILIOUS! YOU NEED "CASCARETS"

Sick headaches! Always trace them to lazy liver delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or a sick stomach. Poisonous, constipated matter, gasses and bile generated in the bowels, instead of being carried out of the system, is reabsorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull sickening headache.

Cascarets remove the cause by stimulating the liver, making the bile and constipation poison move on and out.

of the bowels. The effect is almost instantaneous. Ladies whose sensitive organisms are especially prone to sick headaches, need not suffer, for they can be quickly cured by Cascarets. One taken tonight will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box will keep your head clear, stomach sweet, liver and bowels regular and make you feel bright and cheerful for months. Children need Cascarets, too—they love them because they taste good and never gripe or sicken.

CHAPTER XIX.

Friend or Foe.

For some time after Rose had left her, Berny remained on the bench, not moving, her glance resting on that part of the path whence the young girl's figure had faded from view.

The night slowly deepened, impregnating the gray atmosphere with a velvety depth of shadow that oozed through it like an infusion of a darker, denser element. Lights came out. First sporadically, here and there blooming through the opaque dusk, not suddenly, but with an effect of gradualness, as though the air was so thick it took some time to break through it. Then came more. Rows of windows appeared in long, magnified splatters. All round the plaza there was a suggestion of effaced brightness, as of a painting which had once been sharply outlined and brilliant, but was now rubbed into a formless, impressionist study of shadows and undefined, yellow blurs. The golden halos of lamps blotted the dark at intervals, and now and then the figures, which had occupied the benches, passed into the circles of vaporous illumination, and passed out of them, as if they had been crossing the stage of a theater.

Berny did not move and did not notice the increasing chill of the hour or the moisture beading on her clothes like wintry rain. She was sunk in an abyss of thought, a suspended trance of contemplation, of receptivity to new ideas. In one hour her basic estimate of human nature, her accepted measurement of motives and standards, had been suddenly upset. Her point of view was like a kaleidoscope, which is unexpectedly turned. Sitting motionless on the bench she saw the familiar aspect of life fallen into new shapes, taking on alien forms.

She realized that Dominick had never been happy with her, and, for the first time, she understood the gulf between them. She saw what the life was that he had wanted to lead, and that he could have led with the other woman. It would have been that very form of existence which Berny had always derided, and thought an outward expression of the inward dullness of people who had children, looked shabby, and did not care for money. Now she felt unsure as to whether her scorn of it was not foolish and unenlightened. As in a sudden forward shoot of a search-light, she saw them—Dominick and Rose—happy in a way she had never dreamed of being happy, in a world so far from hers that she had never before had a clear look at it, a man and woman concentrated upon the piece of life that belonged to them, living passionately for each other, indifferent to all that seemed to her of value.

She brought her mental vision back from this upon herself and felt shaken and slightly sick. Seeing beyond the circle of her own experience and sensation for the first time, she would have said to any companion who might have shared her thoughts: "No wonder Dominick didn't get on with me!" For a dispassionately contemplative moment she saw herself in Dominick's eyes; she saw their married life as it had been to him. She felt sorry for both of them—for him in his forced acquiescence with the conditions around him, for herself because of her ignorance of all he had wanted and expected.

"I couldn't be any different," she whispered to herself, "that's the way I am."

She never could be any different. She was one kind of woman and Rose Cannon was another, and Dominick belonged to Rose Cannon's kind. She did not know that it was so much better than her kind but it was different. They made her feel like an outsider in a distant world, and the feeling gave her a sensation of deadly depression. The burning heat of resentment that had made her speak to Rose was gone,

All the burning heats and angers of the last two months seemed to belong to the past. An icy, nostalgic ache of loneliness had hold of her. The accustomed sense of intimacy and warm, enjoying interest in the world—what we mean when we talk of "living"—had been completely drawn out of her.

The cold, biting in to her marrow, at last woke her to a realization of her surroundings, and she sat upright, looking blinking to the right and left. The half-lit plaza lay like a lake of shadow surrounded by a circle of light and girdled by noise. It was like the brightness and animation of the world flowing round her but not touching her, as she sat alone in the darkness.

She rose suddenly, determined to escape, if such were possible, from her gloomy thoughts, and walked toward the upper end of the square, directing her steps to the Spanish and Italian section of the city which is called the Latin Quarter. She walked slowly, not knowing where to go, only determined that she would not go home. She thought for a moment of her sisters, where she could have dinner and find the cheer of congenial society. But on consideration she felt that this, too, was more than she could just now bear. They would torment her with questions and she felt in no mood to put them off or to be confidential. Finally she remembered a Mexican restaurant, to visit which had at one time been a fashion. She had been there with Hazel and Josh, and once in a party with some of the bank people. She knew where the place was and felt that she could dine there with no fear of encountering any one she knew.

With an objective point in view, her step gained decision, and she moved forward briskly, leaving the plaza and plunging into the congeries of picturesque streets which harbor a swarming foreign population. The lights of shops and open stalls fell into the fog, transforming it into thick, churning currents of smoky pallor. Wet walls and sidewalks showed a gold veneer, and lingering drops, trembling on cornices, hung like tiny globes of thin yellow glass.

People and things looked magnified and sometimes horrible seen through this mysterious, obscuring medium. Once behind a pane of glass she saw lines of detached, staring eyes, fastened glaringly on her as she advanced. It was the display in an optician's show-window, where glass eyes were disposed in fanciful lines, like a decoration. She looked at them askance, feeling that there was something sinister in their wide, unblinking scrutiny. She hurried by the market stalls, where the shawled figures of women stood huddled round the butcher's block. They looked as if they might be grouped round a point of interest, bending to stare at something lying there, something dreadful, like a corpse, Berny thought.

When she saw the Mexican restaurant she felt relieved. The strange atmospheric conditions seemed to have played upon her nerves and she was glad to get somewhere where she

She hurried by the Market Stalls, could find warmth and light and people. The place, a little shabby house dating from the era of the projecting shingle roof and encircling balcony, stood on a corner with windows on two streets. It was built upon a slope so sharp that the balcony, which in front skirted the second story, in the back was on a level with the sidewalk. The bright light of gas-jets, under shades of fluted white china, fell over the contents of the show-window. They were not attractive. A dish of old and shriveled oranges stood between a plate of tamales, and another of red and green peppers. There were many files in the window, and, chilled by the cold, they stood along the inside of the glass in a state of torpor.

Berny pushed open the door and entered. The front part of the place was used as a grocery store and had a short counter at one side, behind which stood shelves piled high with the wares demanded by the Mexican and Spanish population. Back of this were the tables of the restaurant. The powerful, aromatic odors of the groceries blended with the even more powerful ones of the Mexican menu. The room was close and hot. In a corner, his back braced against the wall, a Spaniard, with inky dark hair and a large expanse of white shirt bosom, was languidly picking at a guitar.

Berny knew that there was an inner sanctum for the guests that preferred more secluded quarters, and walked past the counter and between the tables. An arched opening connected with this room. Coarse, dirty, lace curtains hung in the archway and, looped back against gilt hooks, left a space through which a glimpse of the interior was vouchsafed to the diners without. It was smaller than the restaurant proper, and was fitted up with an attempt at elegance. Lace curtains—also coarse and dirty—veiled the windows, and two large mirrors, with tarnished and fly-spotted gilt frames, hung on the wall opposite the entrance.

Just now it was sparsely patronized. In one corner two women in mourning and a child were sitting. They glanced at Berny with languid curiosity and then resumed a loud and voluble conversation in Spanish. A party of three Jews, an over-dressed woman and two young men—evidently visitors from another part of town—sat near them. On the opposite side there was no one. Berny slipped noiselessly into a chair at the corner table, her back against the partition that shut off the rest of the dining-room. She felt sheltered in this unoccupied angle, despite the fact that the mirror hanging opposite gave a reflection of her to any one standing in the archway.

The cloth was dirty and here and there showed a hole. Her ineradicable fastidiousness was strong in her even at this hour, when everything that was a manifestation of her own personality seemed weak and devitalized. She was disgustedly clearing away the crumbs of the last occupant with daintily brushing movements of her finger-tips, when the waiter drew up beside her and demanded her order. It was part of this weird evening, when natural surroundings seemed to combine with her own overwrought condition to create an effort of strangeness and terror, that the waiter should have been an old, shriveled man of shabby and dejected mien, with a defect in one eye, which rendered it abnormally large and prominent under a drooping, reddened lid. In order to see well it was necessary for him to hold his head at a certain angle and bring the eye, staring with alarming wildness, upon the object of his attention. His aspect added still further to Berny's dissatisfaction. She resolved to eat little and leave the place as soon as possible.

When her soup came, a thin yellow liquid in which dark bits of leaves and herbs floated, she tasted it hesitatingly, and, after a mouthful or two, put down her spoon and leaned back against the wall. She felt very tired and incapable of any more concentration of mind. Her thoughts seemed to float, disconnectedly and indifferently, this way and that, like a cobweb stirred by air currents and half held by a restraining thread. To her dulled observation the laughter of the Jewish party came mingled with the tinkling of the guitar outside, and the loud, continuous talk from the Spanish women in the corner.

The waiter brought fish—a fried smelt—and she roused herself and picked up her fork. She did not notice that a man was standing near her in the archway, the edge of the lace curtain in his hand, looking about the room. He threw a side glance at her which swept her shoulders, her hat, and her down-bent profile, and looked away. Then, as if something in this glimpse had suddenly touched a spring of curiosity, he looked back again. His second survey was longer. The glance he bent upon her was sharp and grew in intensity. He made no attempt to enter or to move nearer her, but any one watching him would have seen that his interest increased with the prolongation of his scrutiny.

As if afraid of being observed he cast a quick surreptitious look over the room, which in its circuit crossed the mirror. Here, reflected from a different point of view, Berny was shown in full face, her eyes lowered, her hands moving over her plate. This man scanned the reflection with immovable intension. Berny laid down her fork and pushed the fish away with a petulant movement, and the waiter drew back behind the lace curtain. Through its meshes he continued to stare at the mirror, his lips tightly shut, his face becoming rigid in the fixity of his observation.

The waiter entered, his arms piled with dishes, and she made a beckoning gesture to him. He answered with a jerk of his head, and, going to the table where the Spanish women sat, unloaded his cargo there, as he set it out, exchanging remarks with the women in their own language and showing no haste to Berny's summons. She moved in her chair and muttered angrily. The man behind the lace curtain advanced his head and through the interstices of the drapery tried to look directly at her. In this position he could only catch a glimpse of her, but he saw her hand stretched forward to take one of the red beans from the glass saucer in the middle of the table. It was an elegant hand, the skin smooth and white, the fingers covered with rings. She again beckoned, this time peremptorily, and the waiter came. The listener could hear her voice distinctly as he watched her reflection in the glass.

"Why didn't you come when I beckoned?" she said sharply.

"Because I had other people to wait on," said the waiter with equal asperity. "They were here before you."

"What's the matter with the dinner tonight? It's all bad."

"I ain't cooked it," retorted the man, growing red with indignation, his swollen eye glaring fiercely at her. "And no else's complained. I guess it's what's the matter with you?"

Berny made an angry movement—sometimes alluded to as "flourishing"—and turned her head away from him. "Get me an enchilada," she said peremptorily, "and after that some frioles. I don't want anything else."

The waiter moved away and the man behind the curtain, as if satisfied by his long survey, also turned back into the general room. Close to the opening there was an unoccupied table, and at this he sat down, laid his hat on the chair beside him, and unfasted his coat. To the servant who came for his order, he asked for a cup of black coffee and a liqueur glass of brandy. He also requested an evening paper. With the sheet open before him he sat sipping the coffee, the slightest noise from the inner room causing him to start and lift the paper before his face.

Swedish Bridal Lore.

Cures that last are cures that count.

Doan's Kidney Pills make thorough cures.

The following case is typical. Janesville residents should be convinced.

The testimony is confirmed—the cure lasted.

Proof like this cannot be ignored. Mrs. William Mohns, 310 N. Academy St., Janesville, Wis., says: "About two years ago I had an attack of kidney trouble and at that time I got a supply of Doan's Kidney Pills at the People's Drug Store. The use of only two boxes cured me. Other members of my family have taken Doan's Kidney Pills with satisfactory results and I therefore know this remedy to be a reliable one." (Statement given in August 1908.)

THE BENEFIT LASTED. Mrs. Mohns when interviewed on September 23, 1910, said: "I gladly confirm my former endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills. They permanently rid me of kidney complaint and during the past two years, I have had no further need of kidney medicine."

Husband Wants the Credit. When a man hears his wife say something particularly brilliant he is quite certain that some time or other he said it first.

W. A. Smith, Bridgeton, Ind., is telling his friends and neighbors of his return to health and strength by the use of Foley Kidney Pills, and he says he wants others to benefit also. "I was so crippled with rheumatism I could not dress without help and had kidney trouble for years. I started using Foley Kidney Pills and now all my trouble has left me and I do not feel that I ever had rheumatism. I rest well all night and, though 59 years old, can now do the work of a man of 35 years. I would like to be the means of others getting benefit from Foley Kidney Pills."—Badger

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Daily Gazette, Sept. 14, 1872.—Frost:—We have reports of more frost last night along the banks of the streams and in the marshes, but from what we can ascertain, the visitation is not sufficient to damage the tobacco crop. Farmers are working large forces early and late, in their tobacco fields and it is probable that by the end of another week the bulk of the crop will be shedded. State Fair:—The Southern Wisconsin fair commences on Tuesday, the next week and continues until Friday night. The first day will be devoted to receiving articles for exhibition. The entry books are open for today and Monday, at Cyrus Miner's boot and shoe shop. Wednesday, Thursday and Friday are to be the big days of the fair and on these days it is expected that everybody will appear upon the grounds.

Brief Items:—Mallard and teal ducks are plenty at Lake Koshkonong but most of them "lie low" in the impenetrable rice swamps of that region and hunters find it difficult to bag them. Rev. G. W. Lawrence is suffering from an attack of ague. James M. Burgess returned to this city last evening from his somewhat protracted Chattanooga visit. He intends to remain in Janesville.

THE BAREFOOT BOY.

Blessings on thee, barefoot boy!
You must be a happy soul.
How we envy you your joy,
Splashing in the swimming hole!

Find an old man.

IF THIS IS YOUR BIRTHDAY
Many social invitations will come to you and you will be much interested in these pleasures. You are warned not to consider them too important though, and to keep the balance tipped in favor of more material pursuits. Those born today will have much ability along literary lines, in managing affairs and in gaining high positions. They will be kept down sometimes by an inordinate fondness for society.

Had Johnson Stumped.

Doctor Johnson and Macklin were arguing a literary question, when the former quoted Greek. "I don't understand Greek," said Macklin. "The man who presumes to argue literature should understand every language," replied Johnson, severely. Whereupon Macklin began reciting off a string of Gaelic, and for once Johnson had nothing to say.

UNCLE WALT

The Poet Philosopher
Copyright, 1909, by George Matthew Adams
BY WALT MASON

I wish I had a husky tongue, a quently bearing of my own, backed up by India rubber lung, producing silver-clarin tone. The lecture platform I would take (though lecturing is an offense); and then I would a gallus break, a-bundling people chunks of sense. So many men go to and fro explaining that there's but one way to leave behind our grief and woe, and that's to vote for some cheap jay. All politicians are the same, and have been since the world began; they play the same old gold brick game—reformer, chronic, also ran. An he who tells his fellow goats that there's relief in votes, is also dealing in gold bricks. Had I a silver plated jaw, had I a tongue that wouldn't skid, I'd take the platform and I'd paw the air and show where sense is hid. I would not spring a rosy dream, nor talk of bulwarks or of flags; "to work and save" would be my theme, and I would preach it down to rags. Work, work with earnestness, old boy, saw wood, cut ice or hammer nails, and you won't care three whoops in Troy who goes to congress or who fails. Save something from your weekly wage and put that something in the bank, and you'll be calm while others rage about some silly platform plank.

Mrs. J. N. Hill, Homer, Ga., has used Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for years, and says: "I cheerfully testify to the merits of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound, having used it in my family for years and always recommending it. I find it never fails to cure our coughs and colds and prevent croup. I have five children and it is the only thing they take for colds, and always with good results. We would not be without it in our home." Foley's Honey and Tar Compound contains no opiates or harmful drugs. —Badger Drug Co.

IF TOMORROW IS YOUR BIRTHDAY

Your best course will be close application to whatever you wish to succeed in, and your chances are favorable to that success. If you employ your talents will be appreciated and you may expect advancement. Those born Sunday, Sept. 15, will by their own cleverness and good management attain high honors. Their fault are a too assertive disposition holding of opinion.

$80,000,000.00 Lost Annually by Wage Earners.

Dr. Sadler estimates that about $80,000,000.00 in wages is lost annually to the American people as a direct result of colds. Lost time means lost wages and doctoring is expensive. Use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound promptly. It will stop the cough, and heal and soothe the sore and inflamed air passages. Cures your common colds quickly, and prevent their developing into more serious conditions. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound contains no opiates. Is safe for children. The genuine is in the yellow package. Badger Drug Co.

PUBLIC IS ASKED TO AID IN THE MATTER

Persons Answering Fraudulent Advertisements Asked to Notify Gazette.

The Gazette is desirous of keeping out of its columns fraudulent advertising and asks the assistance of its patrons to that end.

There are any number of concerns in the country who make a living through a nicely worded advertisement, offering golden opportunities, and these unscrupulous people find fertile ground for work among the masses.

Many orders are received in the Gazette mail for advertising which are returned as objectionable and where there is a question as to the qualifications the advertisement is omitted. All newspapers have this experience.

But even with the utmost care there will be an occasional advertisement which will pass the scrutiny of the business department of the paper and find its way into the columns.

The Gazette will deem it a favor if you will report to the office any trouble which may have been experienced through the answering of such an advertisement.

For The Boys

Copyright 1912 by I. J. Robinson.

By Orville G. Victor

YOUNG America is as well provided for in the fall and winter styles as is his daddy or his older brother. Houses that make a specialty of the sartorial cravings of the younger masculine members of the family will have all sorts of nice things to tempt the maternal pocket-book about the time that school re-opens next month. I use the term "maternal" purposely, because it is usually Mamma who looks after the wardrobe of the little chap; even though, at the last analysis, it is Papa who takes out his Waterman and signs the checks.

Even as little girls of today are permitted in many cases to dress after the same fashions assumed by their mothers, so are many articles of Son's wardrobe fashioned after those of his father to a certain extent.

A comfortable, well-fitting and nice looking overcoat provided for boys from six years to twelve, for the coming season, is made of soft fabrics, with a shawl collar and a belt all the way around the waist. These come in plaids, browns and grays, the latter predominating, and here-and-there a dark blue.

I learn from one manufacturer of popular priced boys' wear that he has put out a great number of double-breasted overcoats, with convertible collars and all-around belts, for boys. The demand for belted coats of various models will be big this fall, and chinchillas seem to head the list for preference.

Many mackinaw coats will be offered for boys' wear this fall, ranging in sizes from 10 years up. Most of these will be in color combinations, including red-and-black, green-and-black, shaded greys and browns. It looks as though these coats will, to a considerable extent, take the place of the sweater coats that were so popular during the last two seasons.

For the bigger boy, from 12 to 15 years of age, the "Guard" coat promises to be very popular during the coming fall and winter. This coat, also has a belt, but only in the back, extending from each side seam to the centre. The collar is a soft roll, or convertible collar—the latter is gaining fast in popularity. This coat has a pleat in the centre of the back, extending to the bottom from a point an inch or two above the waist line. It is made from chinchillas and soft English cassimeres and wools. It is extremely attractive in appearance, has a semi-military effect, and usually pleases the wearer greatly. Another coat, somewhat like the Guard, is a little more elaborate as to trimming, and costs a little more than the first.

Fall school suits for boys of all ages will be found for the most part in grey and tan cassimeres. These are very "nifty," and are made up with double-breasted jackets and a multitude of pockets. The more pockets to a boy's suit, the better he likes it. There is no doubt that these suits will meet with great favor from the average boy of fourteen years or thereabouts.

The coat has three buttons and is finished with a six-inch vent in the rear and simulated cuffs on the sleeves. Some of the more high-priced garments carry real cuffs. The nicest of these are made from soft imported goods, in woolsens rather than worsteds.

The boys' Russian reefer seems to have dropped out of sight. Dealers assure me that it is a dead proposition, or will be by the time that snow arrives, except when made of a chinchilla. These will be shown in tans, greys and navy blue.

Boys' blouses and Russian suits, which have been so much in evidence throughout the summer, will likewise be out of favor when the frost arrives

Their places will be taken to a great extent by a garment known among the trade as the Norfolk Junior, made almost precisely like their fathers' Norfolk, with the exception of the size and a slight difference in the conformation.

For raincoats the boys will be provided with a garment very like the English "slip-on," which may be purchased at all sorts of prices, according to the make-up and material.

When it comes to headgear for the little chaps, there is considerable variety from which to make selection. For youngsters from three to twelve years of age the "rah-rah" hat will be very popular this fall. The "rah-rah" is made of soft felt, with a brightly colored band contrasting with the color of the hat. It sits on the head like an inverted bowl and is far from expensive.

Another hat which promises to meet the general approval of well-dressed boys is known as the Tyrolean. This is something like the "rah-rah," except that the brim is turned up on both sides, whereas the "rah-rah" has practically no brim.

Schoolboys, as a rule, will wear caps this fall, but of lesser dimensions than those of last season. The brims will not be so obtrusive, nor will the caps come so far down over the ears. These come in the same materials as men's motoring and golf caps, in plaids and stripes. For winter wear they carry earflaps of the same material.

Another winter cap, designed for both boys and girls, is known to the trade as the Angora cap. This is soft, made from Angora yarn, elastic and close-fitting, as the name implies. These are quite inexpensive, and will be found in white, cardinal, navy blue, greys and browns.

As to neckwear, the bigger boys can make selection from the same variety offered their fathers and grownup brothers, so far as four-in-hands and batwings are concerned. Of course, these are made a bit shorter and narrower for the lad than for the man.

Boys carry their watches in the recognized style, too; that is, in the outside breast pocket attached to a chain hanging from the lapel button-hole.

Black stockings prevail for those who wear knickerbockers, but when the boy becomes tall enough to don trousers, he will be provided with the same kind of hosiery as his elder brother—nice tans, blacks, and other solid colors in hose, silk and-lisle and other less expensive makes.
